PREFACE

One cannot have moved much in the world without hearing complaints, both from parents and young persons, about the amount of time and brain spent in the learning of languages, and the little profit derived from this outlay. These complaints, no doubt, arise partly from the want of judgment on the part of the parents, and the want of capacity and inclination on the part of their young hopefuls: parents often acting thoughtlessly on the vulgar notion that far birds have fair feathers, and preferring what is foreign to what is native, and what lies at a great distance in time or space to what is near; and young persons being forced to submit themselves to a grammatical indoctrination in which they feel no interest, and from which they derive no benefit. But it is no less true that these complaints are due in no small measure to false methods of linguistic training generally, or to some cherished prejudices in favour of certain languages on the part of the teachers; and it becomes therefore, at the present day, a matter of great practical importance to inquire how far our traditional methods of teaching languages are in conformity with the method of Nature in her great art of thought-utterance, and how far they may justly be called on to submit themselves to a revision and a reconstitution. We say at the present day emphatically, because it is quite evident that education, following in the train of democratic reform, is one of the watchwords of the hour, to which every good citizen must lend an obedient ear; and not only so, but circumstances have so changed since our schooling received its traditional form, that the wants which were satisfied by our school curriculum and school practice in the days of Milton and Locke now demand an altogether different treatment. In particular, the so-called learned languages, two hundred years ago the only medium of culture to an accomplished English gentleman, have now become the luxury of the leisurely, or the arsenal of the professional few, while other languages, such as German, not named in those days, are now sought after as the keys to the most valuable storehouses of all sorts of knowledge. Add to this that Great Britain, which was then a secondary naval power, and following the French and the Spaniards slowly in the great world-transforming process of colonisation, is now mistress of a world-wide empire from the Ganges to Vancouver Isle, through which stretch she exercises a dominant influence, combining the political virtue of ancient Rome with the commercial activity of Carthage. In these circumstances it becomes the special duty of every British man to acquire a familiar knowledge of the languages of the various races with which he may be brought into political or commercial relations; and, as languages after all are not valuable in themselves, but only as tools by which effective work in certain fields falls to be performed, we ought to see to it, both that we get the proper tools for doing the work, and that we learn to use them in such fashion as to work pleasantly and profitably; and in this view it may be truly said that, while the wrong language in the wrong place is of no use at all, even the right language in the right place, when imperfectly learned, is a tool with which the best workman can do only bad work, and perhaps cut his own fingers in the process.

As language is a function which belongs as much to every normal human creature as seeing or hearing, there can be no difficulty in finding out the method of Nature in its acquisition. We have to answer only two questions: first, What are the factors of the process by which the human babe, from being capable merely of inarticulate cries, like any of the lower animals, is developed into an easy and graceful manipulator of articulate speech? and again, How far, and in what respects, does this model require to be modified in order to enable the expert handlers of the mother tongue to use any second or third language with like expertness? That this cannot be a very difficult matter demands no far-sought induction to prove, as the fact lies before us; for from the Greeks in the South-East to the Highlanders in the North-West we find bilingual and trilingual peoples largely scattered over Europe. It is in fact as easy to learn two or three languages as to learn one, if only the learner be habitually submitted to the natural influences, and guided by the steps of a natural process.

What then, in the first place, are the steps of the process which analysis presents as elevating the inarticulate babe to the significant-speaking boy or girl? There is (1) the direct connection of certain objects with certain sounds and gestures; (2) these objects are such as stand in the nearest relation to the learner, and are presented to him in an atmosphere of the most natural and most pleasant surroundings; (3) the imitative faculty, by which he appropriates the proper sounds, is encouraged and cherished by frequent repetition, till the original impression becomes permanently stamped into his soul, and, so to speak, jumps up spontaneously with the object. Let us, in the next place, ask how far this child’s linguistic ladder is affected by the performer being an adult. Manifestly the difference lies only in one point, and that altogether in favour of the adult, viz. the application of a regulated system to the accidental sequences by which the child learns its mother tongue, easily indeed and pleasantly, but slowly; for he learns not architecturally as a mason builds a house, but by the way, as one picks up a pebble on the shore or a daisy from the meadow; whereas the adult, with his firm will and his reasonable purpose, wishing to learn a language can submit himself to a reasonable and a calculated treatment; and in so doing experience has shown that in favourable circumstances, and under wise training, he can learn a foreign language more perfectly in six months than a child can do in as many years. Why then, you ask, is this not always done? Why does it seem such a difficult business to acquire a familiar knowledge of any foreign language, and why is so much brain and so much time spent so frequently on their acquisition with such scanty results? The answer can be only one: because your teacher has ignored the method of Nature, and given you a bad substitute for it in his own devices; instead of speaking to you and making you respond, in direct connection of the old object with the new sound, and thus forming a living bond between the thinking soul, the perceptive sense, and the significant utterance, he sends you to a book, there to cram yourself with dead rules and lifeless formulas about the language, in the middle of which he ought to have planted you at the start. The evil results of this neglect of the living model of Nature are only too manifest. Books are useful, but they are only secondary; in all matters of observation and practical exercise they may form an apt accompaniment or a supplement, but they never can supplant the vital function of which they are only the dead record. No one learns dancing, or fencing, or golf, or lawn-tennis from a book. The evils caused by this unnatural delegation of the work of a living teacher to the formulas of a dead book are three: (1) The direct connection between the reasonable soul and the new articulate sign of the object is lost; the learner does not shake hands, so to speak, with the object, but he cumbers himself with the phraseology of his mother tongue, and instead of saying at once δός μοι ἄρτον, _give me bread_, he must first ask what is _the Greek for bread_. In this way the new term remains a stranger to his thought, and he uses it uncomfortably, as when a man puts on a pair of shoes which have only an occasional acquaintance with his feet. (2) Then again, when, after being sufficiently tortured with mere grammatical forms, he acquires a certain vocabulary from the elementary reading books, the objects for which this vocabulary supplies the new names are seldom the objects with which he is familiarly surrounded and in which he has a living interest, but they relate to something Julius Cæsar did in Gaul or Cicero said in Rome some 2000 years ago, a region of strange sounds, in which the linguistic neophyte of this nineteenth century has no particular inclination to move, and to which his memory cannot ally itself with any feeling of kinship; and he easily forgets the word, because he does not care for the thing. But (3) even when he does care for the thing, the mere reading of a lesson every day does not in the least ensure that frequent repetition of a new vocable in connection with an object, on which the familiar knowledge of a language depends; whereas, if the teacher had commenced by making his schoolroom an echo-chamber of daily repeated sounds in connection with interesting and familiar objects directly in the view of the learner or near to his daily life, familiarity with a new language, be it Greek or be it German, would come as naturally and as pleasantly to a clever lad of seventeen as the use of the mother tongue to a dainty girl or a rattling boy of seven.

These things being so, and the method of Nature being so plain in the matter, we now ask what are the causes that have led so many of our teachers, even the most accomplished of their class, to neglect so infallible a guide, and to follow methods of linguistic inculcation equally unpleasant in the process and unprofitable in the result?

These causes, fortunately, are as patent as the consequences to which they have led. The first cause is ignorance. In not a few of our educational institutions it is to be feared there are teachers—an over-worked and under-paid class—who are employed to teach languages of which they have only a very superficial knowledge and no firm hold. With persons of this class the whole process of linguistic training amounts to this, _Read your book, Get your lesson, and I will hear you_. Of a living appeal from the tongue of the teacher and a living response from the tongue of the learner these gentlemen have no conception. They must do the most they can, confine themselves within page and chapter of a printed book, where they require no knowledge beyond the marked limits of the lesson, and where the scantiness of their linguistic furniture and the feebleness of their linguistic vitality cannot be exposed. Let them pass. But what of the men of high accomplishment, exact scholarship, and fine taste: why should they scorn the practice which is the foundation of the rules, and the conversation which made great speeches and great poems before rules or schools were heard of? Simply because they have forgotten the lesson taught in a well-known dialogue of Plato,[1] that the printed papers which we call books, useful for record, are rather prejudicial than profitable to the culture of memory; they have become the slaves of their tools, and defrauded the ear and the tongue of their natural rights in the field of significant speech by a wholesale transference of their functions to the eyes. The scholar, in their conception, is a reading animal, and without books he is nowhere. Why then, they will argue, when our object is to read and to understand books, should we trouble ourselves with conversation? We do not learn Latin in order to talk with Cæsar and Cicero, but to read their books; and in like manner we do not study German to drink beer and smoke pipes and sing songs with rollicking students in a _kneipe_, but to ponder with many-sided thought over the poems of Goethe or the speculations of Hegel. So be it. Let books and not living converse be the final end of the study of languages; so they certainly are with the dead languages; but even with regard to them it is quite certain that the familiarity and frequent repetition which are the special virtues of the conversational method both render the mastery of books, as in the case of the mother tongue, more complete, and the hold of the printed signature at once more firm in the grasp and more easy in the approach. But some one will say, Does not speaking in a language imply thinking in it, and is not thinking in a foreign tongue one of the most difficult and rare attainments even with the most accomplished linguists? Not at all. The difficulty lies merely in starting from the wrong end and following the false direction thus given till it culminates in the persistency of a bad habit and the imagination of an impossibility. It is as easy to look the Sun in the face and say □□□□□□□, SHEMISH, as to say SUN, and there is no more difficulty in saying λαβὼν τὸ σκάλευθρον κίνει τὸ πῦρ, than in saying, _take the poker and stir the fire_. In both cases the direct connection of _thought_, _thing_, and _word_ is equally obvious, equally easy, and equally natural; only at the start the habit of thinking exclusively in the mother tongue must be broken.

[1] _Phaedrus_, 275 E.

There is one other objection to the conversational method in the teaching of languages, viz. that it makes a man a parrot. Well, a parrot is an imitative animal, and so is a man, and so far must not be ashamed to own his kinship with the plumy prattler. But he is a parrot and something more; and this something more every sensible teacher will take into account. For myself, I have no preference for random talk: my contention is for regulated talk; the talk first and the regulation afterwards, in the order of gradation so succinctly stated by Lord Bacon—_speaking makes a ready man, reading makes a full man, writing makes an accurate man_;—all the three. But have your nails first before you pare them; this is the common sense of the matter.

In conclusion, I have a word or two to say with regard to the occasion and the plan of this little book. In the first place, whatever may be said of Hebrew or Latin, Greek is a living language, and must be treated as such even by those who persist in the notion that, while the method of living vocal appeal applies in its full extent to modern languages, it is certainly out of place in the treatment of the two ancient languages which justly claim the first place in the linguistic culture of our highest schools. The delusion that Greek is a dead language, springing as it does mainly out of our "insular ignorance," as Professor Seeley calls it, and partly, I fear, our national insolence, will be dispelled in a moment by a glance at any current Greek newspaper; as for instance the following paragraph, the first that met my eye, from the 2d November number of the Athenian "Ἀκρόπολις," giving a short notice of the application of Koch's remedy for consumption.

ΝΕΑ ΚΑΙ ΠΕΡΙΕΡΓΑ.

Ἡ φθίσις ἐν Ρωσσίᾳ.

Ἡ ἀνακάλυψις τοῦ μεγάλου Κὼχ δίδει ἀφορμὴν εἰς τὰς ρωσσικὰς ἐφημερίδας νὰ ἐξετάσωσι πόσοι εἰσὶν οἱ πάσχοντες ἐκ τῆς νόσου ταύτης. Ἐκ τῶν 120,000,000 τῶν κατοίκων τῆς Ρωσσίας, ἂν ὑπολογίσῃ τις μόνον 5 ἐπὶ τοῖς (0)0 πάσχοντας ἐκ φθίσεως, 6,000,000 μόνον Ρῶσσοι ἔχουσι τὴν ἀνάγκην τῆς θεραπείας τοῦ περικλεοῦς καθηγητοῦ. Ὁ ἀριθμὸς εἶνε μάλιστα ἐν τούτοις ἀκριβής. Ἐν Ρωσσίᾳ καὶ ἰδίως εἰς τὰ βορειότερα αὐτῆς μέρη ἡ φθίσις κάμνει μεγίστην θραῦσιν. Ἐν Πετρουπόλει ὡς ἐκ τῆς ἀθλιότητος τοῦ κλίματος καὶ τῆς κακῆς διαίτης τάξεών τινων τῆς κοινωνίας ἡ φθίσις καταστρέφει φρικωδῶς. Ἐν ταῖς οἰκίαις ἀπομεμακρυσμένων τινῶν συνοικιῶν, εἰς οἰκίας εἰς ἃ σπανίως διεισδύει ἀκτὶς ἡλίου βλέπει τις νέας καὶ νέους ὠχροὺς αἱμοπτύοντας καὶ ἐκεῖ εἰς ἀνήλια δωμάτια ἀναμένοντας τὸν θάνατον. Μειδιάσατε δυστυχεῖς· ὁ Κὼχ ἐργάζεται ὅπως ἁρπάσῃ ἀπὸ τὰς χεῖρας τοῦ θανάτου ὅλα αὐτὰ τὰ ἑκατομμύρια τῶν ὑπάρξεων.

Any person who can read classical Greek without a dictionary will have no difficulty in understanding this passage; and, if he is familiar with the New Testament in the original, he will find that some of the principal peculiarities which distinguish the Greek used by the living political and public men of Athens, so far from being corruptions, are no less distinctive features of the κοινὴ διάλεκτος of the Greeks now than they were in the days of the Apostle Paul and the Evangelist John. But this is not all. It requires only a superficial acquaintance with the most patent facts of Greek literature to know that some of the most popular and the most profound teachers of Greek wisdom—Plato, Aristophanes and Xenophon—use the conversational style. The Greeks, in fact, were, as they are still, a lively and a talking people, and Socrates, their greatest name, cannot be better described than as a talking street preacher of reason and common sense. Well, then, on this double basis that Greek is a living language, and that the colloquial style is that in which its highest and best thoughts are expressed; and knowing, moreover, by large experience, that the most effective way to get a firm grasp of any language is to begin by speaking it, some twenty years ago I published a small volume of Greek and English dialogues,[2] which I used in my class in as far as it was possible to do so in such a multitudinous huddlement of untrained lads as the Scottish Universities, contrary to the practice of all educated nations, admit into the junior classes of the Faculty of Arts. The little book came to a second edition; but that it was in anywise generally used by classical teachers I have no reason to believe, partly because, of all classes of men, teachers are the most closely wedded to old bookish habits, and partly because Scotland is not a country to which the world, governed as it is by authority and by names, would look for anything worthy of imitation in the Greek line: "_Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?_" This, as the world goes, was quite legitimate, and gave me no concern. But since that time, as a natural consequence of the great educational movement of the age, some very distinct voices have come to my ear, to the effect that there is something radically wrong in our way of dealing with languages, and that the method of teaching by rules and grammar mainly can no longer be tolerated. I therefore felt it my duty to appeal a second time to the public and to teachers on this important matter, the more so that my little book stood too far apart from the educational attitude of the teachers, and, if it was to find its way into general school use, required a more elementary book as an introduction. This elementary book I now send forth under the title of a _Greek Primer, Colloquial and Constructive_, indicating by this title that the lessons in talking go hand in hand with the grammatical forms naturally educed from them, each lesson being regulated talk, according to a natural progression from the more simple to the more complex forms in ordinary use. This progressive incorporation of the grammar is the feature which distinguishes the lessons of this introductory book from the dialogues in its predecessor; and the necessity of having constant reference to grammatical forms prevented me from giving that unity of subject to the dialogue as dialogue which belonged to the previous volume.

[2] _Greek and English Dialogues for the use of Schools and Colleges._ London: Macmillan, 1871.

I have only further to state, with regard to the use of this little primer in the hands of a teacher, that I have no desire that he should bind himself slavishly to the text. The scraps of talk that are given under each lesson are meant to lend him a helping hand in the use of a new organ; and, to enable both teacher and learner to furnish themselves with a living vocabulary of Greek words in direct connection with their daily surroundings, I have added an alphabetical list of the names of the most familiar objects that belong to the field of life in town or country where the learner may happen to be. When the young Hellenist has stamped its Greek designation directly on every object that meets his eyes, and connected it with some single verb that belongs to its significance in familiar life, I would then suggest that the teacher, besides the daily repetition of certain forms of common conversation, should give a vivâ voce description of pictures hung on the wall two or three times a week, which the learner shall be called on to repeat without any written notes; the principle of the method being always to maintain the direct action of the mind on the object, through the instrumentality of the new sound, without the intervention of the mother tongue. As to when, and how far, and in what kind the usual furniture of elementary books of grammar, reading, and exercises should go parallel with colloquial practice, this I leave altogether in the hands of the practised teacher, being well assured that easy reading and accurate writing, so far from being inconsistent with, are the natural blossom and the ripe fruit of the root of living utterance from which I start.

One other matter requires special notice—a matter not necessarily connected with the colloquial method, but which may be wisely used as a help. To each lesson I have appended a short list of English words, either by family affinity, or by direct borrowing, or by indirect borrowing through the Latin, radically identical with the Greek. The habit of identifying such words under an English disguise will perform the double function of facilitating memory and giving a lesson on the transmutation of sounds and meaning, the tracing of which gives so peculiar a charm to comparative philology. In Appendix I. I have added some of the principles on which these transmutations depend, so far as they are suggested by the words used in the text.

But what of the pronunciation? After what has been shown of the living continuity of the Greek tongue, from Byzantium downwards to the present day, there cannot be the slightest doubt that Greek orthoepy should be treated in the same fashion that the orthoepy of French, German, or any other living tongue is treated. The pronunciation is ruled by the practice of the present, not by philological facts or fancies as to the pronunciation of the past. No doubt, as Heraclitus says, πάντα ῥεῖ, _all things flow_, as in the universe, so in language, there is no fixation—there is always change. But the changes which take place in living languages, like English or Greek, are of a very different kind from those which take place when a language like Latin becomes dead, and rises to a new life in the form of such specific varieties as Spanish, Italian, and Portuguese. They are of the nature of a normal growth, and are at all events only exaggerations or expansions of a native tendency. To such exaggerations every spoken language is subject, and few more than our insular English, as any one may see who will compare the accentuation of English in the time of Chaucer with the orthoepy of the present hour. But in respect of accents at least Greek has been far more conservative than English, so much so indeed that the accentual marks placed on Greek words by the Alexandrian grammarians two hundred and fifty years before Christ, in the practice of the Greek Church and the Greek people still indicate the same dominance of voice on the accented syllable that the Athenian ear recognised as classic in the orations of Demosthenes and the apostolic eloquence of St. Paul. There can therefore be no greater barbarism than to disown this legitimate music of Greek speech, as is done both in England and Scotland, when we pronounce ἀγαθὸς ὁ θεός, like Latin or English, ἄγαθος ὁ θέος; not to mention the staring absurdity and loss of brain implied in the practice of the great English schools of first pronouncing the word with a false accentuation, and then stultifying the daily practice of the ear by learning a rule to say where the accent ought to have been placed! Nothing could more distinctly show the falseness of our habit of flinging the burden of learning languages on formulas of the understanding and leaving the living organ of linguistic practice altogether out of account. Therefore, by all means, either drop the accents out of the grammar, or use them whenever you give the written word voice in the air. As to the quantity of the vowels, which is the stumbling block with most English scholars, we have no lack of words, even in our own unmusical English, such as _lándholder_, in which, as in the Greek ἄνθρωπος, the antepenultimate has the rising inflexion, while the penult is long; and if the modern Greeks pronounce ἄνθρωπος as if written ἄνθροπος, that is only a natural curtailment of the unaccented syllable which lies in the nature of human speech, and will be found exemplified more or less in all languages. As to the vocal value of the separate vowels and consonants, this, no doubt, is a point in some cases of considerable difficulty; but it is quite certain that _a_, both in Latin and Greek, has the broad sound as in Italian and Scotch, not the sound of the English in _pātent_, that ι is the most slender of the vowel sounds, not the broad semi-diphthongal sound of the English in _prime_ or _sigh_, that ου has the soft sound of _oo_ in _boom_, not the _bow-wow_ sound of _ou_ as in _howl_; also that αι in all probability was pronounced as in the English _vain_, not as in the German _Kaiser_. On the whole matter of pronunciation, however, the English scholar should bear in mind that the poetry of the ancients was composed on musical principles, with a strict regard to the quantitative value of the vowel on which the rhythmical accent fell, a practice which necessarily caused the spoken accent to be dropped in verse, or very much subordinated; and again, if his ear should happen to be very much offended by the predominance of the slender sound of ι in the familiar πολυφλοίσβοιο θαλάσσης of Homer, there is no reason why he should not adopt a special vocalisation for the reading of the Greek poets, just as we in our reading of Chaucer must constantly put a final accent on words that, if applied to the spoken tongue, would render the speaker either ridiculous or unintelligible. But in whatever fashion the teacher of Greek in this country may choose to settle this delicate point, the matter of pronunciation has nothing radically to do with the great principle of linguistic practice which this little book inculcates. To start with the practice of speaking will facilitate the acquisition of a new language under any system of pronunciation; only this must distinctly be said, that the scholar who has learned to read Greek with a vocalisation and an accentuation invented by himself for himself has deliberately cut himself off from all intelligible communion with the people whose literary tradition he values so highly, and with whom to maintain a familiar intercourse, both in a political and a literary point of view, should be no secondary consideration with the wise.

In conclusion, I have great pleasure in returning thanks to the learned Hellenists who kindly undertook the task of revising the proofs of this little work as they came from the press, viz. Mr. Hardie, Balliol College, Oxford; Principal Geddes, Aberdeen; Principal Donaldson, St. Andrews; and Mr. Gardiner, Edinburgh Academy; and if I have not in every instance taken advantage of their suggestions, it is because on principle I have no sympathy with the nice sensibility which refuses the stamp of classicality to all forms and idioms unsanctioned by the usage of Attic writers, preferring to float my skiff freely on the great Catholic Greek of all ages, from Plato to Polybius, from Polybius to Chrysostom, and from Chrysostom to Thereianos and Paspati.

THE GREEK LETTERS

The Greek letters, borrowed as they were from the East and adopted by the Romans, are substantially the same as the Roman letters of our common English usage, and in fact differ from them both in figure and power scarcely more than our present English type differs from the old English black letter or the common German type. A few remarks will suffice to show where or how far the pronunciation varies from our English use of the same letters.

Greek English Figures. Names. Figures.

NOTES

A is always the broad _a_ (=ah) of all European languages, and never softened down to the English _ā_, as heard in _pātent_, _nátion_.

Β in the spoken Greek of the present day is softened down to the cognate _v_, exactly as in Gaelic _b_ with the _h_ appended becomes _v_, as _ban_, fair, with _h_, _bhan_ = _van_.

Γ, when followed by the broad vowels _a_ and _o_, is pronounced hard as in English and Gaelic; but when followed by soft vowels the _Greeks_ now give it the sound of the English _y_ in _yes_, _yellow_—γέλως, γέρων,—just as in German the _g_ in the third syllable of _Göttingen_ is so softened down as almost to disappear.[3] This euphonic action of a weak vowel upon a strong consonant preceding is natural and found in most languages; exactly as the Italians in their soft dialect of Latin have changed Κικέρων into _Chichero_, _ch_ being pronounced as in the English _church_.

Before κ, γ, χ and ξ, the letter γ has the sound of _n_, as in ἄγγελος, in Latin _angelus_, English _angel_.

Δ, or D, is in like manner softened into _th_ as in the English _mother_; thus δέν _not_, from οὐδέν, pronounced οὐθέν.

E is our short _e_, as in _get_; never long _ē_.

H, or ἦτα, was in ancient times always a long _ē_, English _ā_ as in _gate_; now it is always _ee_ as in _seem_ or _theme_.

Θ is the English _th_, as in _mouth_, _south_.

I is always the slender English _ee_, either short as in _peep_ or long as in _scēne_.

Ξ is _ks_, _gs_, contracted into _x_.

Y, from which our _y_ came, was in ancient times identical with the delicate _ü_, _ue_, of the Germans, halfway between οὐ = _oo_ and _ee_, into which in the living language it is always softened, exactly as in some parts of Germany _Brüder_ is pronounced _Brēēder_.

X is an aspirated _k_, but pronounced like _milch_ in German or _loch_ in Scotch, which the English, who do not possess this beautiful soft guttural, generally sharpen into a _k_, as in _lake_.

Ω, omega, as the name indicates, is simply a long _o_, as in πῶλος, _a foal_.

For the English _h_ the Greeks used a simple mark of aspiration turned to the right thus, ἱερός _sacred_, pronounced _hee-er-ŏs_, while the same mark turned to the left, as in ἔρως, simply signifies the absence of the _h_. Whether this _spiritus lenis_, as it is called, was put on the initial vowel to indicate the presence of an original _h_ which had vanished, I cannot say; but one can readily fancy that if the Cockney fashion of calling Highgate _Igate_ were to become general, every such curtailed word might receive a mark thus, _’igate_, as the survival of a lost breathing.

Besides the vowels in the alphabet we find in Greek, as in other languages, compound vowel sounds called diphthongs. They are seven—αι, ει, οι, αυ, υι, ευ and ου. Their ancient pronunciation is very difficult to expiscate, and in them we note the partiality of the Greeks for the slender sound of _ee_, called by a Latin writer _gracilitas_, and by modern scholars _itacism_. This tendency has wiped off the diphthongal character altogether from οι, υι, and ει, which are all pronounced like a single ι, English _ee_. To balance this, αι becomes the English _ai_, as in _vain_; ου retains its full soft roundness as in _gloom_; while in αυ and ευ in the living Greek the υ has assumed a consonantal value and become _v_, from which usage the εὐαγγέλιον of the Gospels has become the _evangelium_ of the Latin Church, and the _evangel_ of English; so αὐλός, _a flute_, is pronounced _avlóss_, and this _v_ is aspirated into the kindred _ƒ_, when the following consonant is κ, π, τ, θ, χ, ξ, σ, or ψ, as in αὐτός, _aftos_, εὔξεινος, _efxeinos_. That the ancients, at least in poetry, did not do this is evident from the full diphthongal value of a long sound given to the εὐ in εὐαγής and such-like words by the dramatic writers.

ACCENTUATION AND QUANTITY

In respect of accentuation the Greek language has the advantage above most others that, while in Latin, English, or German the proper intonation of a word in doubtful cases can only be known by an appeal to a dictionary or to an authoritative speaker, in Greek every word in a book, as it stands before the eye, exhibits and perpetuates the tonic relation of the syllables to one another. The student has but to observe the rise or fall of the syllables on his page as he would do the notes in a piece of music, and he cannot go wrong. Only a few characteristic points require to be laid down to make the principle on which the practice depends intelligible.

The word _accent_, taken from the Latin grammarians, evidently signifies a certain music of speech, a singing to or with (_ad_ and _cano_) an articulate word; while the expression used by the Greek grammarians, τόνος from τείνω, indicates a stretch, stress, or intension of the voice on the syllable so affected. Taking these two elements together we see that a Greek word, say καλός, _beautiful_, with the mark of the acute accent on the last syllable—hence called oxytone, from ὀξύς, _sharp_—is pronounced with an elevation of the voice, which brings along with it a dominance of the syllable on which it stands above the other syllables with which it is connected. It stands to reason that after such a dominance given to one syllable the voice, if there be a subsequent syllable, will fall; and so, as in πραγμάτων, the final syllable will be pronounced in a lower tone which is called grave. In the general use this lower-toned syllable requires no special mark, being sufficiently indicated by its necessary subservience to the accented syllable; with the Greeks, however, it seems to have been the practice to pronounce an oxytone word, when it occurs in the middle of a sentence, in a lower tone than at the end, and so the word καλός in the middle of a sentence, as in καλὴ παρθένος, is marked with a grave accent from left to right instead of from right to left; but this, though it lowers the tone, does not affect the dominance of the syllable. It is just as if in music the same note, with the same rhythmical dominance, were sung an octave lower. Practically, the learner need not concern himself curiously about the matter.

It is a rule, both in Greek and Latin, that no word can be accented farther back than the third syllable from the end, the antepenultimate, the favourite accent of the English language. But, while this rule, in a musical point of view, preserves the language from such a rattle of insignificant sounds as in _lámentable_, _mílitary_, and not a few other quadrisyllables in our unmusical English tongue, it manifestly requires a correction from the side of penultimate and oxytone accentuation to achieve the just balance of the music of speech. In this respect Greek is decidedly superior to both Latin and English; for, while Latin rejects the sonorous cadence of the accent on the last syllable altogether, English uses it only in some verbs, remnants of the past participle of Latin verbs, as in _rejéct_, _suppóse_, _accépt_, and such-like; and in the case of the penult the fine swelling cadence of the Greek words, in which the acute accent of the penult is followed by a final long syllable, altogether fails, as in πραγμάτων, which an Englishman, following his English ear, will pronounce not only πράγματων but πράγματον, as if ω were ο. The student, therefore, will carefully train his ear to give all oxytone words their full value, and never to say ἄγαθος ὁ θέος instead of ἀγαθὸς ὁ θεός, or κάλος ὁ ἄνηρ for καλὸς ὁ ἀνήρ.

By the quantity of a word we mean the comparative duration of the sound, exactly as in music a [symbol: minim] is related to a [symbol: quaver]; and in Greek the accentuation stands in a very marked relation to the quantity of the syllables, which in practice asserts itself prominently as follows:—

(1) It is an invariable condition of the antepenultimate accent that the last syllable be short, as in ἄνθρωπος, a man; and in consequence,

(2) If in the course of flexion a word with an antepenultimate accent takes a long final vowel, as in the genitive and dative singular of the second declension, the accent of the first syllable is advanced to the penult, as in ἀνθρώπου.

(3) The converse takes place in verbs, where the accent is naturally on the root, as in λέγω, of which the imperfect is ἔλεγον; but in the aor. mid. indic., while the third person is ἐλέξατο, the first person is not ἐλέξαμην, but ἐλεξάμην.

A long syllable of course, as in προφήτης, may have an acute accent on a long vowel with the same right as a short syllable; but there are many long syllables in Greek which are marked neither with an acute nor a grave but with a circumflex, which is a prolonged accent compounded of a rise and a fall marked thus ^, or for greater ease, ~. These words are generally compounds of which the elements are quite plain, as in φιλοῦσι for φιλέουσι, τιμῶσι for τιμάουσι; in other words, as in σῶμα, a body, or the genitive plural of the first declension, as πολιτῶν, and some others, the single elements from which the complex tone arose were either historically known to the grammarians or legitimately assumed. At all events, every syllable in Greek with a circumflex accent is practically treated as if it had two accents; σῶμα as if it were σάὸμα, χρῶμα as χρόὰμα, πρᾶγμα as if it were πράὰγμα, and so on. It follows from this, and the principle that no word can be accented farther back than the antepenultimate, that, if in the course of flexion a word with a circumflex on the penult receives an additional syllable so as to become, in accentual value, a quadrisyllable, the accent must be advanced; thus from τιμῶμαι,[4] I am honoured, we can say τιμᾶσθε in the second person plural, but we cannot say τιμῶμεθα, so must say τιμώμεθα. The change of accentual marking in this instance is of no practical value to the student, but in the case of enclitics, of which we shall now speak, it affects the ear most decidedly.

[4] Final αι and οι for accentual purposes are pronounced short in the terminal flexions of nouns and verbs—τέτυμμαι, ἄνθρωποι, τράπεζαι.

Enclitics are small words, which, so to speak, have not force enough to stand on their own legs, but lean (ἐγκλίνω) on the weightier word that precedes them for support, and become absorbed in it; just as in English we say _don't_ for _do not_, and in Italian _dimmi_ for the Latin _dic mihi_. These enclitics are πού, ποτέ, γε, and a few others, the oblique cases of the personal pronouns, the indefinite pronoun τις, and the verbs εἰμί, _I am_, φημί, _I say_, except in the second person singular. The effect of their being thus taken up by the previous word and forming a new whole must, in not a few cases, materially affect the position of the accent; for, while in καλός τις, _a certain good-looking fellow_, there is no change in the intonation of καλός to the ear, the moment I say κάλλιστος τις, I either violate the rule which forbids the accent on the fourth syllable from the end, or I keep to the rule and say κάλλιστός τις. In the same way when I say ὁ διάβολος, _the devil_, simply, I preserve the antepenultimate accent with full effect in its natural place; but if I apply the reproachful term to a special person, and say, as in John vi. 70, ἐξ ὑμῶν εἷς διάβολός ἐστιν, _one of you is a devil_, I immediately, to give the ἐστιν something to lean on, must make the διάβολος oxytone. Similarly, I cannot write πνεῦμα ἔστιν, which in accentual value would be a compound word of five syllables, but I must say πνεῦμά ἐστι (John vi. 63), when the last syllable of the supporting word with the two syllables of the enclitic become accentually a new word of three syllables with a legitimate antepenultimate accent.

If the position of the accent, a point often not a little troublesome even to natives in the orthoepy of their own language, has been relieved of all practical difficulty by the curious prevision of the Alexandrian elders, the quantity is even more simple. With the double aid of the two separate signs for long vowels, η and ω, and the quantity of the final vowel as determined by its relation to the previous accented syllables, the only difficulty that remains is obviated by the mark ¯ over the long vowels, and the ◡ over the short ones found in all good dictionaries. In the present little work it will be sufficient to mark the long vowel where it occurs in doubtful cases, and leave the short ones to be understood as short from the absence of the long mark. But the real difficulty that prevents both accent and quantity from being easily acquired by English scholars is the negligent practice of transferring Latin or English habits of accentuation to Greek words, as when θεός is pronounced like _Déus_, and Σωκράτης as _Sócrates_, and again the supposition that the accent cannot be put on a syllable without making it long, or removed without making it short. Let only the honest attempt be made to pronounce ἄνθρωπος, not as _anthroāpos_, but as in _lándhōlder_, _córndēaler_, and other such words, and the α in Σωκράτης, not like _a_ in _claw_ or _maw_, but like the _a_ in _lattice_ and _scatter_, and the difficulty will vanish like the gleam of a mirage before the firm foot and the cool eye of the traveller.

LESSON I.—NOUNS

NOMINATIVE AND OBJECTIVE CASE

FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSION

VERBS

THREE PERSONS SINGULAR, PRESENT INDICATIVE

A noun is the name of a thing or person, a verb signifies an action, an adjective a quality as good or bad belonging to a noun. The nominative case is the person who is or may be doing what the verb means; the objective case is the thing or person to which or towards which the action of the verb tends. The verb _to be_, denoting simple existence, not action, of course is followed by the nominative, not the objective case.

Nouns are masculine, feminine, or neuter.

Masculines generally end in ος. Feminines in η or α, a few in ος—ὁδός, _a way_, βίβλος, _a book_, παρθένος, _a maiden_. Neuters in ον.

The objective case ends in ν, the ν being added to the termination of feminines, and substituted for the ς in masculines. In neuters the nominative and objective are the same. Adjectives follow the same rule.

Verbs: first person ends in ω, second in ς, and third in ει or ᾳ, as—ὁρῶ, ὁρᾷς, ὁρᾷ, _I see, thou seest, he sees_. ἀκούω, ἀκούεις, ἀκούει, _I hear_, etc.

So—

θαυμάζω, _I wonder_. μῑσῶ, _I hate_. φιλῶ, _I love_. ἔχω, _I have_.

USEFUL IMPERATIVES

φέρε, _bring_. δός, _give_. ἰδοῦ, _behold! here!_

The article _the_ is declined masculine, feminine, and neuter like the nouns, thus—ὁ ἡ τὸ τὸν τὴν τὸ

It never has α in the feminine.

The verb _to be_, εἰμί, has second person εἶ, third ἐστί, or before a vowel ἐστίν, and in plural ἐσμέν, ἐστέ, εἰσί.

The pronouns of the first and second persons are—ἐγώ μοῦ, ἐμοῦ μοῖ, ἐμοί μέ, ἐμέ _I of me to me me_ σύ σοῦ σοί σέ _thou of thee to thee thee_ λαμπρός ἐστι ὁ ἥλιος, _the sun is bright_. καὶ καλὴ ἡ ἡμέρα, _and the day beautiful_. ὁρᾷς τὸν ἥλιον; _do you see the sun?_ ὁρῶ νεφέλην, _I see a cloud_. νεφέλην στυγνὴν ὁρῶ, _I see a dark cloud_. ὁρᾷς τὸν καπνόν; _do you see the smoke?_ ὁρᾷς τὸν οὐρανὸν τὸν κυανοῦν; _do you see the blue sky?_ ἀκούεις τοῦ ποταμοῦ; _do you hear the river?_ ἀκούεις τῆς βροντῆς; _do you hear the thunder?_ θαυμάζεις τὸ δένδρον τόδε τὸ ὑψηλόν; _do you admire this tall tree?_ θαυμάζω καὶ μἄλα γε, _I admire it extremely_. ὁρᾷς τὸ ῥόδον τοῦτο τὸ καλόν; _do you see this beautiful rose?_ καὶ τὸ λείριον τὸ λευκόν; _and the white lily?_ καὶ τὴν πόαν τὴν χλωράν; _and the green grass?_ καλός ἐστιν ὁ κῆπος, _the garden is beautiful_. καὶ σοφὸς ὁ κηπουρός, _and the gardener wise_. ὁρῶ ἄκανθαν, _I see a thistle_. κᾰκόν, κᾰκόν, _bad, bad!_ αἰσχρόν, αἰσχρόν, _ugly, ugly!_ μῑσῶ τὴν κακὴν ἄκανθαν, _I hate the ugly thistle_. φιλῶ τὸ ῥόδον τὸ καλόν, _I love the lovely rose_. μῑσεῖς τὴν ἀκαλήφην; _do you hate the nettle?_ μάλιστα, _certainly_. σφοδρός ἐστιν ὁ ἄνεμος, _the wind is strong_. φιλῶ τὴν σκιάν, _I love the shade_. καὶ τὴν σκέπην, _and the shelter_. φέρε τὴν τράπεζαν, _bring the table_. ποῦστι ὁ πέτασος ὁ ἐμός; _where is my hat?_ δός μοι τὸν πέτασον, _give me the hat_. φιλῶ πῖλον ἐγώ, _I love a cap_. κῖνει τὸ πῦρ, _or_ τὴν ἐσχάραν, _stir the fire_. δός μοι τὸ σκάλευθρον, _give me the poker_. ἔχεις πυράγραν; _have you tongs?_ ἰδοῦ, _there_. ὁρᾷς τὸ κάτοπτρον; _do you see the mirror?_ ἔχεις ἕδρᾱν; _have you a seat?_ ἔχεις ὑποπόδιον; _have you a footstool?_ ἔχεις κλῖνην; _have you a sofa?_ δός μοι τὴν βακτηρίαν, _give me my stick_. τὸ παιδίον τόδε τίς ἔστι; _who is this little boy?_ ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ ἐμός, _my brother_. ἔστι σοι ἀδελφή; _have you a sister?_ φιλῶ δεῖπνον, _I love dinner_. ἔχεις ἄρτον καὶ βούτῡρον; _have you bread and butter_? καλὸν τὸ ἀργυροῦν ποτήριον τοῦτο, _this silver cup is beautiful_. φέρε τὸ καλαμάριον, _bring the inkstand_. λάβε, _take it_. οὐχ ὁρῶ κάλαμον, _I do not see a pen_. ἰδοῦ, _here_. χάριν ἔχω, _thanks_. δός μοι χειρόμακτρον, _give me a napkin_. ἔτι δὲ τοῦ σάπωνος, _and some soap_. ἰδοῦ σάπωνα τὸν τοῦ Πεαρσίου, _here it is, Pears' soap_. θεῖον πάνυ χρῆμα τοῦ καθαρτικοῦ, _a splendid cleanser!_ νῦν δὴ λευκαί μοι αἱ χεῖρες ὥσπερ ἡ χιών. Ἔρρωσο. _now my hands are white as snow. Farewell_.

LESSON II

CASES, GENITIVE AND DATIVE

The genitive case signifies the source _from_ which a thing comes and to which it belongs, as the _folly of fools_, the _fool's folly_, the folly that comes from the fool. The dative case means either the secondary or more distant object of an action, as _I gave the book to the boy_; or it _signifies rest_ or _residence in a thing_, for which in English there is no special form; also in Greek it signifies the instrument with which, or by which, a thing is done, as to _cut_ with a _knife_. In Greek masculines in ος have the genitive in ου and the dative in ῳ; feminines in ρᾱ or ρᾰ and ίᾱ have the genitive in ας and the dative in ᾳ; other feminines in α—as τράπεζᾰ, _a table_—and feminines in η have ης in the genitive and ῃ in the dative.

ὁρῶ νεφέλην ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, _I see a cloud in the sky_. θαυμάζω τὴν σοφίαν τὴν ἐν τῷ σῷ ἀδελφῷ, _I admire the wisdom that is in your brother_. δὸς τῷ ἀδελφῷ τὸν κάλαμον τόνδε, _give your brother this pen_. καὶ τὸ καλαμάριον, _and the inkstand_. ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ σὸς θαυμάζει τὸ λευκὸν ῥόδον τὸ ἐν τῷ κήπῳ, _your brother admires the white rose in the garden_. ἀκούεις τῆς τοῦ ποταμοῦ βροντῆς; _do you hear the thunder of the river?_ ἡ βία τοῦ ἀνέμου ταράττει τὸν κῆπον, _the violence of the wind disturbs the garden_. καὶ τόν γε πέτασον ἐπὶ τῇ ἐμῇ κεφαλῇ, _yes, and the hat on my head_. κῖνει τὸ πῦρ τῷ σκαλεύθρῳ, _stir the fire with the poker_. ὁρᾷς τὴν ἕδραν τὴν τοῦ ἐπισκόπου; _do you see the bishop's seat_? ἰσχυρός ἐστι· ἐσθίει τὸν τῶν πονούντων ἄρτον, _he is strong; he eats the bread of labour_. δός μοι τὸν κάλαμον τὸν τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ, _give me your brother's pen_. φέρε τὸ καλαμάριον τὸ τῆς ἀδελφῆς, _bring your sister's inkstand_. κόπτε τὸν κάλαμον τῇ μαχαίρᾳ, _cut the pen with the knife_.

LESSON III

PLURALS, NUMERALS, DIMINUTIVES

The plural of verbs is in ομεν, ετε, and ουσι for the three persons. In pure verbs αομεν becomes ῶμεν, ᾶτε, and ῶσι; ε becomes οῦμεν, εῖτε, and οῦσι.

The plural of nouns in ος is in οι, nominative. ων, genitive. οις, dative. ους, objective.

Neuters have nominative and objective α.

The plural of feminines is in αι, nominative. ῶν, genitive. αις, dative. ᾱς, objective.

The relative pronoun, ὅς, ἥ, ὅ, _who_, _which_, is declined all through, like masculine nouns in ος, and feminines in η, and neuters in ον.

The numerals are—εἷς, μία, ἕν; δύω, τρεῖς, τέσσαρες, πέντε, ἕξ, ἑπτά, ὀκτώ, ἐννέα, δέκα, in their order; εἴκοσι, _twenty_; ἑκατόν, _a hundred_; χίλιοι, _a thousand_; μύριοι, _ten thousand_.

Diminutives are mostly neuter, ending in άριον, ίον, and ύλλιον: as ἵππος, _a horse_—ἱππάριον, _a pony_; παῖς, _a boy_—παιδίον, _a little boy_; βρέφος, _a babe_—βρεφύλλιον, _a little babe_. Masculine is ίσκος, as παιδίσκος, _a young boy_, with feminine παιδίσκη, _a little girl_.

The adjective πολύς, _many_ (German _viel_), is declined in the nominative—πολύς πολλή πολύ

and objective—

πολύν πολλήν πολύ

otherwise regularly, as if from πολλός-ή-όν.

It is a peculiarity of Greek syntax that neuter plurals are joined with a singular verb, as καλῶς ἔχει τὰ πράγματα, _matters are going on well_.

γράφομεν καλάμῳ, ὁρῶμεν τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, _we write with a pen, and see with our eyes_.

τὴν ἐπιστολὴν ἥν σοι γράφω δὸς τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, _the letter which I write for you give to your brothers_.

πόσους ἔχεις ἀδελφούς; _how many brothers have you?_

ἕξ, ἀδελφὰς δὲ ἑπτά, _six, and seven sisters_.

δεινὰ ταῦτα, _that is too bad!_

πόσα ἔχεις ῥόδα ἐν τῷ πετάσῳ; _how many roses have you in your hat?_

δώδεκα, λείρια δὲ ἕξ, _twelve, and six lilies_.

πόσους ἔχει ἵππους ὁ ἀδελφός; _how many horses has your brother?_

τρεῖς, _three_.

ὁρᾷς τοὺς κύκνους καὶ τοὺς γεράνους ἐν τῇ λίμνῃ; _do you see the swans and the cranes in the loch?_

ὁρῶ, δεινὸν τὸ πλῆθος, _yes, a very great number_.

καὶ δὴ καὶ τρεῖς μόσχους κομψοὺς ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ; _also three pretty calves in the field?_

ἔτι δὲ ἱππάριον, κόσμιον, βαλιόν; _also a neat little piebald pony?_

τί γελᾷς; _what are you laughing at?_

ἐκεῖνο τὸ παιδίον ἱππαζόμενον ἐπὶ τοῦ ἱππαρίου, _that boy riding on the little pony_.

καὶ δὴ καὶ τρέχει ὀπίσω ἡ παιδίσκη ἡ κομψή, _and behind runs the pretty little girl_.

τερπνὸν τὸ θέαμα, _a pleasant sight_.

ὁ θαυμαστὸς οὐτοσὶ δύο ὁρᾷ ἡλίους ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, ἡμεῖς δὲ ἕνα μόνον ὁρῶμεν, _this strange man sees two suns in the sky; we see only one_.

μῖσοῦμεν τὴν φωνὴν τοῦ μωροῦ, _we hate a fool’s voice_.

τοῦ δὲ σοφοῦ φωνὴν φιλοῦμεν, _but we love the voice of the wise man_.

οἱ ἀστρονόμοι πολλὰ ὁρῶσι τοῖς τηλεσκοπείοις ἃ ἡμεῖς οὐχ ὁρῶμεν, _the astronomers see many things with their telescopes which we do not see_.

πολλὰ μὲν ἔχει δένδρα ἡ ὕλη, λόγους δὲ πολλοὺς ἡ τῶν μωρῶν γλῶσσα, _there are many trees in the forest, and many words in a fool’s tongue_.

πολλὰς κόπτομεν ἀκάνθας ἐν τοῖς ἀγροῖς, _we are cutting down many thistles in the fields_.

καὶ οὐκ ὀλίγας, ὡς ἐλπίζω, ἀκαλήφας, _and not a few nettles also, I hope_.

ἃς σὺ μῖσεῖς, ἀκαλήφας, _the nettles which you hate_.

δικαίως ἔγωγε, πάντες γὰρ μῖσοῦσιν τὰς ἀκαλήφας τὰς κακάς, _with good reason too. All hate the evil nettles_.

τί πράττετε; _what are you about?_

γράφομεν ἐπιστολάς, _we are writing letters_.

ἐπιστολὰς λέγεις; _do you say letters?_

καὶ μάλα γε, πρὸς τὴν βασίλισσαν, _yes, to the queen_.

θαυμαστὰ λέγεις, _wonderful!_

ἀγαθὴ ἡ βασίλισσα, καὶ πρὸς τὰς εὐχὰς οὐ κωφὴ τὰς τῶν πιστῶν πολιτῶν, _good is the queen, and not deaf to the prayers of loyal citizens_.

δίκαια λέγεις, _you say what is just_.

LESSON IV

THIRD DECLENSION, SINGULAR

The third declension of nouns in Greek is more rich and varied than the other two, and, besides, is distinguished by a peculiarity from which the others are free, viz. while in the first and second declensions all that requires to be done in forming the cases is to change the last syllable of the nominative commencing with a vowel, leaving the main body of the word unchanged, as ἡμέρα,-ας, ἄργυρ-ος,-ου, in the third we observe that the final consonant of the root seems in many cases to have been assimilated or absorbed by the termination of the nominative, and reappears in the other cases, as in ἐλπίς, genitive ἐλπίδος. Sometimes also the vowel of the last syllable of the nominative is shortened before the addition of the genitival termination, as in ποιμήν, ποιμένος. In some classes of nouns no change is made, and the analogy of the two other declensions is followed throughout. We shall take our examples from the more simple classes, leaving the more complex and exceptional to be learned in the course of reading.

The general type is—

-ος, genitive. -ι, dative. -α, objective.

as—σωτήρ, _a saviour_. σωτῆρος, _of or from a saviour_. σωτῆρι, _to a saviour_. σωτῆρα, _a saviour_. κώδων, _a bell_. κώδωνος, _of a bell_, etc. λυμεών, -ῶνος, _a blackguard_, etc.

and a number of words signifying a dwelling-place, as—ἵππος, _a horse_; ἱππών, -ῶνος, _a stable_. ἐλαιών, -ῶνος, _an oliveyard_. παρθενών, -ῶνος, _room of the virgin_; and nicknames of men:

γάστρων, -ωνος } } _paunchy_. φύσκων }

And to this class which follows the analogy of the other declensions our first colloquy is confined.

(1) ὁρᾷς τὸν ἀροτῆρα τῷ ἀρότρῳ κόπτοντα τὴν γῆν; _do you see the ploughman cutting up the ground with his plough?_

χρήσιμον τὸ ἔργον τοῦτο καὶ ἀναγκαῖον, _this is a useful and necessary work_.

ἰσχυρὸν ἔχει ἵππον ὁ ἀροτήρ, _the ploughman has a strong horse_.

τίνος ἐστὶν ἡ εἰκὼν ἐκείνη; _what likeness is that?_

τοῦ Ιησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν, _the likeness of Jesus Christ our Saviour_.

θεῖον πάνυ τὸ πρόσωπον, _an altogether divine countenance_.

τίς ἐστιν ἡ βίβλος ἐκείνη ἡ λαμπρά; _what is that grand book?_

ἡ γεωγραφία τοῦ Στράβωνος, _the geography of Strabo_.

τί πίνεις ἐκ τοῦ κρατῆρος ἐκείνου; _what are you drinking out of that bowl?_

πίνομεν τὸν οἶνον, _we are drinking wine_.

δός μοι τὸν τρίβωνα τὸν παλαιόν, _give me my old cloak_.

ἐκ μικροῦ σπινθῆρος δεινὴ πολλάκις ἀνάπτεται φλόξ, _from a small spark often a fearful flame arises_.

ὡς γράφει ὁ Ἀπόστολος Ἰάκωβος, _as James the Apostle writes_.

καίτοι τί ταῦτα λέγεις; _but why do you say this?_

φοβεῖ μὲ ὁ πολὺς ἐκεῖνος καπνὸς ὁ ἐκ τῆς καπνοδόχης, _I fear that quantity of smoke from the chimney_.

ἀκούω τοῦ κώδωνος καὶ τῆς τοῦ κλητῆρος φωνῆς ὃς ἐγείρει τοὺς πολίτας, _I hear the bell, and the voice of the crier who wakes the people_.

οὐ σμικρὸς ὁ κίνδῡνος, _there is great danger_.

ἀκούω τοῦ ἀλεκτρυόνος, _I hear the cock_.

(2) Nouns in ωρ and ην shorten the long ultimate vowel of the nominative, as ῥήτωρ, ῥήτορος; ποιμήν, ποιμένος; ὕδωρ, ὕδατος, _water_.

ὁρᾷς τὸν ποιμένα ἐκεῖνον μετὰ τῶν προβάτων ἐν τῷ λειμῶνι; _do you see that shepherd with the sheep in the meadow?_

ὁρῶ, καὶ τὸν κύνα, _I see them and the dog_.

ἆρα οὖν ἀκούετε τῆς φωνῆς τοῦ δεινοῦ ἐκείνου ῥήτορος; _do you hear the voice of that great orator?_

ἀκούομεν· μᾶλλον δὲ ἀρέσκει ὁ τῶν χελῑδόνων τρισμὸς καὶ τῆς ἀηδόνος τὸ ᾆσμα, _we hear; but like better the twitter of the swallows and the song of the nightingale_.

δίκαίως· αὗται γὰρ κινοῦσι τὸ βαθὺ τῆς ψυχῆς, _with good reason; for these stir the depths of the soul_.

(3) Feminines in ΄ῐς and ΄ᾰς, with the radical δ before the case terminations, as λαμπᾰ́ς,-άδος; ἐλπῐ́ς,-ίδος. Neuters in α have the genitive in τος. Words ending in ψ = πς or βς, as λαῖλαψ, λαίλαπος, _a storm_; φλέψ, φλεβός, _a vein_; Κύκλωψ,-ωπος, _a Cyclops, Giant Round Eye_, lose the σ of the nominative and present π or β before the case termination. In the same way nouns in ξ = κς or γς, by losing the final σ of the compound consonant, cause the single κ or γ to reappear in the oblique cases, as ἱέραξ, _a hawk_, ἱέρᾱκος; ἀλώπηξ, _a fox_, gen. ἀλώπεκος; κόραξ, κόρακος, _a crow_, ἔρχεται ὁ ὑετός, _the rain is coming_.

οὐδαμῶς, _not at all_.

τὴν ψιλὴν ψεκάδα οὐκ ἔγωγε ὑετὸν λέγω, _a thin drizzle I do not call rain_.

ἐκείνη ἡ νεφέλη σημαίνει λαίλαπα, _that cloud foretells a storm_.

λαμπρὰν ἔχω ἐλπίδα καλῆς ἡμέρας, _I have bright hope of a beautiful day_.

ὁρᾷς ἐκεῖνο τὸ γυναικάριον ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ; _do you see that little woman in the field?_

λέγουσι μαινάδα εἶναι, _they say that she is mad_.

καὶ πιστεύω ἔγωγε, _I for one believe it_.

δός μοι τὴν κρηπῖδα, καὶ τὸν πέτασον καὶ τὴν χλαῖναν, _give me my boot, my hat, and my plaid_.

ποῦστι τὸ ὑπόδημά μου τὸ ἕτερον; _where is my other shoe?_

τί ἔχεις ἐν τῷ στόματι; _what have you in your mouth?_

ἄρτον· χάριν ἔχω τῷ Θεῷ, _bread, thank God!_

τί γράφεις; _what are you writing?_

ποίημα, _a poem_.

πότερον νοῦς ἔστιν ἐν τῷ ποιήματι; _is there any sense in the poem?_

πῶς οὔ; οὐ φυσῶ φυσήματα ἐκ σαπῶνος, _of course; I don’t blow soap-bubbles_.

ὁρᾷς ἐκεῖνον τὸν κόρακα; _do you see that crow?_

ὁρῶ, περιπατεῖ ὡς κληρικὸς σεμνῷ τῷ βήματι, _I do; he walks like a clergyman, with a grave step_.

τί ἐστι τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ ἐνδόξου ἐκείνου ῥήτορος; _what is the name of that famous orator_?

Γλάδστων, _Gladstone_.

ὄνομα Σκωτικόν, _a Scotch name_.

καὶ μάλα γε· ἔχει γὰρ ἑρμηνείαν τὸ ὄνομα, λίθος ὁ τοῦ ἱέρᾱκος, _certainly, for the interpretation of the name is_ the stone of the hawk.

ἔστι Γλάδστων ὄνομα δήμου τινὸς ἐν τῇ χώρᾳ τοῦ Μεσολωθιᾶνος, _Gladstone is the name of a parish in Midlothian_.

τί πράττει ὁ παῖς ἐκεῖνος; _what is that boy doing?_

μαστιγοῖ τὴν βέμβῑκα, _he is whipping his top_.

αὐτὸς μᾶλλον ἄξιος τῆς μάστῑγος, κακοῦργον γὰρ τὸ θρέμμα, _himself is more worthy of the whip, for he is a wicked creature_.

ἔτι δὲ ἀργός· οὐκ ἄξιος τοῦ ἄρτου, _also idle; not worthy of his bread_.

νομίζω ἔγωγε τὸ νῶτον αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν μάστῑγα ἐγγὺς προσήκειν γένει, _I think the whip and his back are nearly related_.

κακός ἐστιν· ἀλώπεκος καὶ ἄρκτου μῖγμα παράδοξον, _he is bad; a strange mixture of a fox and a bear_.

(4) Nouns in ῑς and ῡς have ν in the objective, as σῦς, _a pig_; ἰχθῦς, _a fish_, κῑς, _a woodworm_. Also those in ῐς and ῠς, as πόλις, _a city_, πόλιν; ὄφις, _a snake_, ὄφιν; πῆχυς, _a forearm_, πῆχυν. These have the genitive in εως, and the dative in ει, as πόλεως, πόλει.

πατήρ, _a father_, and μήτηρ, _a mother_, have πατρός and μητρός in genitive, and πατρί and μητρί in dative; but the objective is in the regular form with the short penult πατέρα. θυγάτηρ, _a daughter_, follows the same rule, ἀνήρ has ἀνδρός, ἀνδρί, ἄνδρα.

βασιλεύς, _a king_, and ἱερεύς, _a priest_, have the genitive in έως, and the dative in εῖ, like πόλις, but the objective is έα. βοῦς, _an ox_, has βοός, βοί, and βοῦν.

γυνή, _a woman_, has genitive and dative -αικός, -αικί, and objective -αῖκα.

ὁρᾷς τὸν καλὸν ἰχθῦν ἐν τῷ ὕδατι; _do you see that beautiful fish in the water_?

ὁρῶ, στίλβει τὸ θρέμμα, ὥσπερ μαργαρίτης, _yes, the creature glances like a pearl_.

ἕτερον πάνυ ὁ σῦς ὁ ῥυπαρὸς ἐν τῷ συφεῷ, _very different is the filthy pig in the sty_.

μῑσῶ τὸν σῦν, _I hate the pig_.

ὅμως χοῖρος σιτευτὸς λαμπρὸν ἄγαλμα τοῦ δείπνου, _nevertheless a fatted pig—bacon—is the great glory of a dinner_.

ὁρᾷς τὸν ὄφιν ἐν τῇ πόᾳ; _do you see the snake in the grass?_

μῑσῶ τὸ θρέμμα, _I hate the creature_.

διὰ τί; _why?_

ἔχει κίνδῡνον, _it is dangerous_.

φρίττω τὸ ζῷον, πρόσωπόν γε τοῦ διαβόλου, _I shudder at the creature, a mask of the devil_.

ἔχει πατέρα ὁ ὄφις τὸν Σατανᾶν, _the snake has Satan for his father_.

πολλὰ ἔχει πρόσωπα ὁ διάβολος, _the devil has many masks_.

αἱρετώτερον δὲ καλῆς γυναικὸς τὸ πρόσωπον, _specially that of a fair woman_.

καὶ δὴ καὶ ἱερέως ὑπερηφάνου, _and that of a proud priest_.

ἔτι δὲ βασιλέως ἀνόμου καὶ τυράννου ὠμοῦ, _also of a lawless king, and a cruel tyrant_.

καὶ ἀνδρὸς ἑκάστου τῶν ἐν πόλει ὅσοι πονηροί, _and of any bad man in the town_.

(5) Adjectives of this declension occur most commonly in one of these three forms—

(α) ων, -ονος, masculine and feminine; ον, neuter—as σώφρων, _sound-minded_; πρόφρων, _forward_, _ready_—like nouns in ων _supra_. (β) ής, as ἀληθής, masculine and feminine; ἀληθές, neuter; genitive in οῦς and dative in εῖ—ὑγιής, _healthy_; σαφής, -ές, _distinct_, _clear_.

(γ) ύς, masculine; εῖα, feminine; ύ, neuter; as γλυκύς, _sweet_; βαρύς, _heavy_.

μέλας, _black_, has μέλαινα, μέλαν, and τάλας, _wretched_, the same.

ἀληθὲς τὸ δόγμα τοῦτο τὸ περὶ τοῦ διαβόλου, _this doctrine about the devil is true_.

καὶ μάλα γε καὶ βαρύ, _yes, and weighty_.

γλυκὺ τὸ μέλι μετὰ τὸ πικρόν, _sweet is honey after sour_.

δημιουργοὶ αἱ μέλισσαι τοῦ μέλιτος τοῦ γλυκέος, _the bees are the makers of sweet honey_.

βασιλέως γλύκυσμα τὸ μέλι, _it is a king’s dainty, honey_.

στέργομεν σύμπαντες τὰ νώγαλα καὶ τὰ τρωγάλια ἀκόλουθα τοῦ δείπνου, _we all like dainties and a dessert to follow the dinner_.

LESSON V

THIRD DECLENSION, PLURAL

The plural terminations of the third declension are—ες, nominative, α, neuter. ων, genitive. σι, dative. ᾰς, objective, α, neuter; as ποιμήν, ποιμένες, λαῖλαψ, λαίλαπες, following always the type of the genitive singular, as πατέρες, not πατρές; but ἀνήρ has ἄνδρες, not ἀνέρες. Only in the dative plural the final consonant ν, δ, or τ is dropped before the σι of the dative, as ποιμέσι, _to shepherds_; στόμασι, _to mouths_; λαμπάσι, _to torches_.

The adjective πᾶς, πᾶσα, πᾶν follows this rule, having παντός in the genitive, but πᾶσι in dative plural; so γίγας, _a giant_; γίγαντος, _of a giant_; but γιγᾶσι, _to giants_.

οὗτος ὁ πατὴρ πάντα τὰ χρήματα δίδωσι ταῖς θυγατράσι, τῷ δὲ υἱῷ οὐδέν, _this father gives all the money to his daughters, to his son nothing_.

οἱ μὲν τῆς ἐκκλησίας πατέρες πολλοί, ἕκαστος δὲ παῖς ἕνα μόνον ἔχει πατέρα, _the fathers of the church are many, but each boy has only one father_.

δὸς τοῖς μὲν παισὶ βακτηρίαν, ταῖς δὲ παρθένοις σκιάδειον, _give a stick to the boys, a parasol to the young ladies_.

γίγᾱς πάνυ ὁ παῖς οὑτοσί, καὶ τέρας γε πρός· δακτύλους γὰρ δὴ ἑπτὰ ἔχει ἐπὶ τοῖς ποσίν, _this boy is a giant, and a monster to boot; he has seven toes on his feet_.

τούτων τῶν παιδῶν πάντων ἄτοπόν τι ἔχει ἡ ἐσθής, παρέχουσά γε τὴν μὲν χλαμύδα μέλαιναν, τὸ δὲ πῑλίδιον ξανθόν, _the dress of all these boys is ridiculous, a black plaid with a yellow cap_.

ἀληθῆ λέγεις, _true_.

LESSON VI

THE DEGREES OF COMPARISON IN ADJECTIVES

The general form is τερος for the comparative and τατος for the superlative, the genders following the type of the substantives of the first and second declensions, as δίκαιος, _just_, δικαιότερος, δικαιότατος; also, to avoid the concurrence of four short syllables unfavourable to the dactylic rhythm of the early poetry, the ότερος in certain cases becomes ώτερος, and the ότατος, ώτατος, as—σοφός, _wise_, σοφώτερος, σοφώτατος.

So— φοβερός, _terrible_. χαλεπός, _difficult_. φανερός, _plain_.

Adjectives in ας, αινα, αν, and in ης, ες, add the τερος and τατος to the neuter, as—μέλας, _black_, μελάντερος, -τατος. ἀληθής, _true_, ἀληθέστερος, -τατος. ἀκριβής, _accurate_, ἀκριβέστερος, -τατος; a termination which is assumed also by adjectives in ων, as εὐδαίμων, _happy_, εὐδαιμονέστερος,-τατος.

Some adjectives are compared by ιων,-ον, and ιστος,-η,-ον, as—καλός, _beautiful_; καλλίων, _more beautiful_; κάλλιστος, _very beautiful_. ἡδύς, _sweet_, ἡδίων, ἥδιστος. ταχύς, _swift_; θάσσων for ταχίων, _swifter_; and τάχιστος, _very swift_.

This form belongs also to some common irregular comparisons as—ἀγαθός, βελτίων, βέλτιστος, _good, better, best_. μέγας, _great_, μείζων, μέγιστος. κακός, _bad_, χείρων, κάκιστος. πολύς, _many_, πλείων, πλεῖστος; which follow in declension the law of the substantives of the same type, as μείζων, μείζονος; πλείων,-ονος, plural πλείονες, contracted πλείους.

Comparatives are either accompanied with a genitive or followed by ἤ—as ὁ υἱὸς μείζων ἐστὶ τοῦ πατρός, _the son is taller than the father_—or ἢ ὁ πατήρ.

οὗτος ὁ νεανίσκος πολὺ μικρότερός ἐστι τῆς ἀδελφῆς· νᾶνός ἐστι, _this young man is much less than his sister; he is a dwarf_.

λέγει ἡ ἁγία γραφὴ ὅτι ὁ Σαοὺλ πολὺ μέγιστος ἦν πάντων τῶν συμπολιτῶν, _the holy scripture says that Saul was by far the tallest of all his fellow citizens_.

οὐ σοφώτατος δέ, _but not the wisest_.

ἄμεινον τοῦ μεγέθους ἡ σοφία, _wisdom is better than stature_.

πόσα ἄτακτα ῥήματά ἐστιν ἐν τῇ Ἑλληνικῇ γλώσσῃ; _how many irregular verbs are there in the Greek tongue?_

οὐκ οἶδα, _I do not know_.

περὶ τούτου γε χρὴ ἐρωτᾶν τὸν μάντιν, τὸν Οὐείτχιον, _on this point you must consult the oracle, Veitch_.

φοβερὸν τὸ πλῆθος, _a terrible multitude_.

πλείω ἢ οἱ κόρακες ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ, _more than the crows in the field_.

ἀληθέστατα λέγεις, _you say what is very true_.

λέγω τὸ ἔμοιγε πονηρότατον καὶ χαλεπώτατον, _I say what for me at least is a very painful and a very difficult business_.

μὴ ἀθύμει· πολλὰ ἔχει κακὰ ὁ βίος, παγκάκιστον δὲ τὸν ἀπελπισμόν, _don't despair; there are many bad things in life, but the worst is despair_.

τῶν δὲ ἀγαθῶν ἐν τῷ βίῳ τί βέλτιστον; _and of the good things in life which is best?_

ἡ πίστις, _faith_.

ὡς λέγει ὁ προφήτης Ἀμβακούμ· ὁ δίκαιος ἐκ πίστεως ζήσεται, _as the prophet Habakkuk says, the just man shall live by faith_.

οὗ οὐκ ἔχει λόγον ἀληθέστερον ἡ ἁγία γραφή, _a word than which nothing more true is found in holy scripture_.

πατὴρ τῆς ἀνδρείας ἡ πίστις, ἀνδρεία δὲ τῶν ἀνδρικῶν ἔργων πατήρ, _faith is the father of courage, and courage is the father of manly deeds_.

κάλλιστα λέγεις, _admirable_.

καλὸς ὁ λόγος, κάλλιον δὲ τὸ ἔργον, _a beautiful saying, but more beautiful is the deed_.

ἄνευ ἔργου πάντων κενώτατον πραγμάτων ὁ λόγος, _without the deed speech is the most empty of all things_.

ἐλαφρότερον τῶν ἀχύρων, _more light than chaff_.

καὶ οὐδὲν ἧττον στεῖρον, _and not less barren_.

ἔρρωσο, _farewell_.

LESSON VII

THE FUTURE ACTIVE

The characteristic letter of the future tense is σ, inserted before the terminations that mark the persons, thus: λύω, _I loosen_; λύσω, _I will_; λύσεις, _thou wilt_; λύσει, _he will_; λύσομεν, _we will_; λύσετε, _ye will_; λύσουσι, _they will loosen_. Of course by inserting this σ, a preceding consonant, where the root is labial, uniting with it forms a ψ, as above in nouns (Lesson IV, 3); and in the same way, when the final vowel of the root is a palatal the κ or γ appears as ξ—so, from βλέπω, _I see_, βλέψω; from λέγω, _I say_, λέξω. But there are several variations, which will be learned by practice; the following are dominant:—

(α) Verbs with two consonants before the ω of the present eject the latter before inserting the σ, so that the π or φ of the root united with the σ becomes a ψ, as in τύπτω, τύψω; κόπτω, _I cut_, κόψω; σκάπτω, _I dig_, σκάψω; γράφω, _I write_, γράψω.

(β) The same rule holds with many verbs in σσω, Attic ττω, the root ending in κ or γ, as πράσσω, _I do_, root πραγ, future πράξω; τάσσω, _I arrange_, τάξω.

(γ) Verbs in άζω have either σω or ξω, or both, as θαυμάζω, _I admire_, θαυμάσω; νυστάζω, _I nod_, άσω or άξω; ἁρπάζω, _to carry off_, ξω, ἁρπάσομαι in Attic; βαστάζω, _to carry_, βαστάσω.

(δ) Pure verbs generally lengthen the vowel of the present, α being changed into η, except where a vowel or λ precedes the άω, as— τιμάω, _I honour_, τιμήσω. φιλέω, _I love_, φιλήσω. δηλόω, _I show_, δηλώσω. But— κλάω, _I break_, κλάσω. κοπιάω, _I labour at_, κοπιάσω.

But some in έω prefer έσω, as τελέω, _I finish_, τελέσω; τρέω, _to tremble_, τρέσω; ζέω, _to boil_, ζέσω.

(ε) Liquid verbs shorten the long vowel of the root, or throw out the last of two consonants in the root, and lay a circumflex accent on the termination ω, as— μένω, _I remain_, μενῶ. σπείρω, _I sow_, σπερῶ. φαίνω, _I show_, φανῶ. βάλλω, _I throw_, βαλῶ. τέμνω, _I cut_, τεμῶ.

νῦν δὴ φοβεῖς με· δεινὸς ὡς ἀληθῶς ὁ χρόνος οὗτος ὁ τοῦ μέλλοντος, _now indeed you frighten me; this future tense is terrible_.

γέλοια λέγεις· οὐκ ἐάσω σε τὰ τοιαῦτα λέγειν· λέγε μᾶλλον τὸ τῆς παροιμίας, χαλεπὰ τὰ καλά, _ridiculous; I will not permit you to speak thus; say rather, as the proverb has it, all excellent things are difficult_.

λέξω, _I will say so_.

ἔχε πίστιν, _have faith_.

πιστεύσω καὶ νῑκήσω, _I will believe and conquer_.

αἰνέσει σε ὁ πατήρ, _your father will praise you_.

οὐδὲν διστάζω, _I do not doubt it_.

ἀνδρικὸν δηλώσεις θυμόν, _you will show a manly spirit_.

βλέψω ἀνδρικῶς πρὸς τὸν διάβολον καὶ οὐ τρέσω, _I will look manfully in the face of the devil and not tremble_.

τί σκάπτει ὁ φύσκων ἐκεῖνος ἐν τῷ λειμῶνι; _what is that paunchy fellow digging at in the meadow?_

σκάπτει τάφρον, _he is digging a trench_.

σκάπτει τοὺς θεμελίους λαμπροῦ οἰκήματος, _he is digging the foundations of a grand house_.

οὐδαμῶς· τὸν τοιοῦτον οὐ θαυμάσομεν, _not at all; such a fellow we will not admire_.

ἰδιώτης ἐστί· πόνον μὲν ἔχει, τέχνην δὲ οὔ· κόψει ποτὲ τὸν ἴδιον δάκτυλον τῇ μαχαίρᾳ, καὶ δὴ καὶ τὸν ἴδιον αὐτὸς ἑαυτοῦ σκάψει τάφον· τοιοῦτο γὰρ δὴ φιλεῖ γίνεσθαι τὸ τῶν ἀπαιδεύτων τέλος, _he is a bungler. LESSON VIII

THE PAST TENSE

The first aorist or indefinite past tense follows the type of the future, with a σ before the personal terminations, and an augment ε prefixed to the whole word, as a sign of the past tense, thus—πράξω, _I will do_. ἔπραξα, -ας, -ε, _I, thou, he_ } _did_ ἐπράξαμεν, -ατε, -αν, _we, you, they_ }

In liquid verbs, where the future has no σ, the aorist lengthens the vowel of the penult, as—μένω μενῶ ἔμεινα στέλλω στελῶ ἔστειλα τείνω τενῶ ἔτεινα

There is another form of the past in

-ον -ες -ε -ομεν -ετε -ον as ἔτυπον for ἔτυψα, which some verbs prefer, as in ἔβαλον, _I threw_, from βάλλω, βαλῶ; ἔκραγον from κράζω, and some have both, as ἤνεγκα, ἤνεγκον, _I brought_, irregular from φέρω, _I bring_, future οἴσω, _I will bring_.

οἶδα, _I know_, has οἶδα, οἶσθα, οἶδε, _I, thou, he_ } _know_. ἴσμεν, ἴστε, ἴσασι, _we, you, they_ }

and with the past participle, εἰδώς, -ότος.

ᾔδειν, ᾔδεις, ᾔδει, _I, thou, he_ } _knew_. ᾔδειμεν, ᾔδειτε, ᾔδεσαν, _we, you, they_ } ἅπερ ἐγὼ ἔπραξα χθές, σὺ πράξεις αὔριον, ἀεὶ γὰρ ὑστερεῖς, _what I did yesterday you will do to-morrow; you are always behind_.

τίς τὰ φύλλα ἔκοψε τῆς καλῆς ἐκείνης βίβλου; _who cut the leaves of that beautiful book?_

ἐγώ, _I did_.

ἔκοψας, νὴ Δία, ἀμβλείᾳ τῇ μαχαίρᾳ· πρὸς δὲ τούτοις ῥυπαροί εἰσι σοὶ οἱ δάκτυλοι, _verily you cut it with a blunt knife; besides, your fingers are filthy_.

νίψω τῶ χεῖρε,[5] _I will wash my hands_.

[5] A dual number for τὰς χεῖρας, which both in nouns and verbs the Greeks sometimes used for a pair of persons or things. See the grammar.

ἔδωκα ἐκείνῃ παρθένῳ μῆλον, ὁ δὲ παῖς ἥρπαξε· τίς ποτε ἐδίδαξεν αὐτὸν τὸ τέχνημα τόδε; _I gave that girl an apple, and the boy seized it. Who taught him that trick?_

κακοδαίμων τις, _an evil genius_.

τίς ἔβαλε τὸν λίθον; _who threw the stone?_

ὁ παῖς ὁ ἐν τῷ κήπῳ, _the boy in the garden_.

παράνομός τις ἐστί, _he is a lawless boy_.

χθὲς διέθραυσε πλάκα ὑαλίνην ἐν τῇ τοῦ φροντιστηρίου τοῦ ἐμοῦ θυρίδι, _yesterday he broke a glass pane in my study window_.

οὐχί· ὁ αἴλουρος ἦν ὁ ἁμαρτωλός· ἐμήνυσαν αἱ ῥῖνες αἱματηραὶ τὴν ἁμαρτίαν τοῦ ζῴου, _not so; the cat was the sinner; the bloody nose of the animal declared its sin_.

τὴν βίβλον ἣν ἔδωκά σοι χθὲς ἐγχειρίσεις (Attic ἐγχειριεῖς) τῇ ἀδελφῇ· ἀγαθὴ γὰρ ἡ παρθένος καὶ βιβλοῦ ἀγαθῆς ἀξία, _the book which I gave you yesterday you will hand over to your sister; she is a good girl, and worthy of a good book_.

τίς ᾠκοδόμησε τοῦτο τὸ ἱερόν; _who built this church?_

τέκτων τις, _an architect_.

τέκτων μὲν οὔ, ἐργάτης δέ τις λίθων, _not an architect, a stonemason_.

ὁ γὰρ ἀληθὴς τέκτων ποιητής ἐστι· καὶ τὸ οἰκοδόμημα ὅπερ ᾠκοδόμησε χθὲς ποίημα μένει λίθινον αὔριον καὶ ἀεί, ὡς ἔστιν ἰδεῖν ἐν τῇ Αἰγύπτῳ, _for a true architect is a poet; and the edifice which he raised yesterday remains a stone poem to-morrow and for ever, as one may see in Egypt_.

τίς εἶδε τὸν παῖδα ὃς ἀπέκοψε τὸν κλάδον τοῦ δένδρου ἐκείνου; _who saw the boy who cut the branch of that tree?_

εἶδον ἐγώ, _I saw him_.

ἄγε αὐτὸν δεῦρο· μαστιγώσω τὸν κακοῦργον, _bring him to me; I will flog the rascal_.

σήμερον πάντως οὐ δειπνήσει, _he shall have no dinner to-day_.

ἢ δειπνήσει γε μετὰ τῶν συῶν, _or dine with the pigs_.

ἐβούλευσα αὐτῷ καλὴν βουλήν, _I gave him good advice_.

μάτην, _in vain_.

οὐκ ἤκουσε, _he did not hear_.

κωφός ἐστι, _he is deaf_.

κωφὸς δὴ πρός γε τὴν τῶν σοφῶν βουλήν, _yes, deaf to the counsel of the wise_.

χθὲς ἔκλεισε τὰ ὦτα πρὸς τὸν τοῦ σοφοῦ Σολομῶνος λόγον· τοῦ ἄφρονος οἱ ὀφθαλμοί εἰσιν ἐπ’ ἄκρα τῆς γῆς, _yesterday he closed his ears to the word of the wise Solomon: the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth_.

ἤκουσε τοῦ μὲν λόγου, τὸν δὲ νοῦν οὐ κατέλαβε, _he heard the word, but he did not take in the sense_.

ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ ὁ ἄφρων ἐπλήρωσε τὸν ἐγκέφαλον διανοημάτων κενῶν, _his foolish brother filled his brain with vain imaginations_.

καὶ ἐπίστευσε τῷ ἀδελφῷ μᾶλλον ἢ τῇ ἁγίᾳ γραφῇ, _and he believed his brother rather than the holy scripture_.

ὦ τοῦ ἀτυχήματος, _sad! sad!_

LESSON IX

INFINITIVE MOOD AND PARTICIPLES

The infinitive mood gives the action of the verb substantively as we use the participle in _seeing is a good thing_, but in Greek, as in Latin, always the infinitive, as καλὸν τὸ ὁρᾶν, and declined with the article like a noun, through all the cases, of course neuter, as the gender does not lie in the action, but in the actor. Its normal ending in the active voice is ειν, as in the present βάλλειν, _to throw_, and second aorist βαλεῖν; but in first aorist its termination is αι, as κόψαι, from κόπτω. Pure verbs follow their vowel, as τῑμᾶν, _to honour_; φιλεῖν, _to love_.

Like substantives, verbal infinitives are governed by prepositions through all the cases, as περί, _about_; παρά, _from beside_; μετά, _with_; ἐν, _in_, and εἰς _into_—as περὶ τοῦ καπνίζειν λέγω μέτρον ἄριστον, _about smoking I say moderation is best_.

Participles are verbal adjectives declined as such, and signifying the quality or accident of a certain state of being or action belonging to an agent.

The participles of the present and of the second aorist are declined in masculine and neuter according to the type of the second declension, in feminine according to the first, as—τύπτων, τύπτουσα, τύπτον, _he, she, or it_ } τύπτ-οντος, ούσης, οντος, _of him, her, or it_ } _striking_. οντι, ούσῃ, οντι, _to him, her, or it_ }

The first aorist participle bears the type of the third declension, as in γίγας, γίγαντος, _a giant_—so ποιήσας, _having made_; feminine ποιήσᾱσα, neuter ποιῆσαν.

genitive, -αντος -ᾱσης -αντος. dative, -αντι -ᾱσῃ -αντι. objective, -αντα -ᾱσαν -αν.

Pure verbs have a long vowel or diphthong: thus, from περιπατέω περιπατῶν περιπατοῦντος τιμάω τιμῶν τιμῶντος ἆράγε εἶδες ἐκεῖνον τὸν παῖδα ἐν τῷ κήπῳ περιπατοῦντα; _did you see that boy walking in the garden?_

εἶδον, _I did_.

καλὸν τὸ περιπατεῖν καὶ ὑγιές, οὐ τοιοῦτον δὲ τῷ κλέψαντι τὰ μῆλα, _walking is good and healthy, but not for him who stole the apples_.

τῑμῶσα τὴν βασίλισσαν τῑμᾷς τὴν πόλιν ἧς δὴ ἐκείνη κεφαλὴ ἐστίν, _in honouring the queen you honour the state of which she is the head_.

περὶ τοῦ ὑπνοῦσθαι οὐδὲν ἀκριβῶς ἐπιτάττω· ἓν μόνον λέγω, οὐχ ὑγιὲς τὸ ὑπερβάλλειν ὀκτὼ ὥρας ἐν τῇ κοίτῃ, _about sleeping I prescribe nothing curiously; only this one thing I say, that to lie in bed more than eight hours is not healthy_.

ἀληθῆ λέγεις, _you say well_.

τοῖς γε ὑγιὲς ἔχουσι τὸ σῶμα, _at least for those who have a healthy body_.

τὸ γὰρ ἀργεῖν διαφθείρει τό τε σῶμα καὶ τὴν ψυχήν, _for lying idle damages both body and soul_.

μάλιστα· καὶ τὸ πράττειν ὁτιοῦν ἐναντίον τῷ συστήματι τοῦ ὅλου διαφθείρει τὴν ψυχήν, ὡς λέγει ὁ τῶν καλῶν ἔργων ἀπόστολος, ὁ Ἰάκωβος· εἰδότι τὸ καλὸν καὶ μὴ ποιοῦντι, αὐτῷ ἁμαρτία ἐστίν, _certainly, for to do anything contrary to the system of the universe destroys the soul, as James the apostle of good works says, “to him that knoweth what is good and doeth it not, to him it is sin.”_

τῷ λαλοῦντι πολλὰ πολὺς ὁ κίνδῡνος, _to the great talker there is great danger_.

ἐν δὲ τῷ ὀλίγα λέγειν μεγάλη ἡ σωτηρία, _but in speaking little there is great safety_.

μεγάλη βιβλιοθήκη χρησίμη ἐστὶν εἰς τὸ πολλὰ εἰδέναι, _a good library is useful to get great knowledge_.

πῶς γὰρ οὔ; ὅμως οὐκ ἀεὶ εἰς τὸ σοφῶς βιῶναι, _certainly, but not always for wise living_.

πολλὰς βίβλους δυνατὸν τοὺς ἀσθενεῖς ἐγκεφάλους κυκᾶν, _it is possible that many books may confound weak brains_.

τὸ λεγόμενον, πολλοὶ ὄντες οἱ μάγειροι διαφθείρουσι τὸν ζωμόν, _as they say, many cooks spoil the broth_.

καὶ κατὰ τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον παμπλήθη ἔπιπλα ὑπὲρ τὸ πρέπον καὶ τὸ ἡδὺ ἐκπληροῖ τὸ οἴκημα καὶ ταράττει τοὺς εἰσβαίνοντας, _and in the same way, a great quantity of furniture, beyond what is proper and comfortable, fills up the room, and inconveniences those who enter_.

σοφῶς. ἀεὶ κακὸν τὸ ὑπερβαίνειν, _wise. All excess is bad._

τὴν σοφίαν λέγεις τοῦ Ἀριστοτέλους· ἐν τῷ μέσῳ ἀεὶ ἡ σωτηρία, _the wisdom of Aristotle: safety lies in the mean_.

LESSON X

THE OTHER PAST TENSES

The imperfect, with the augment prefixed as the sign of the past, is as follows; from κόπτω—ἔκοπτ-ον, -ες, -ε, _I, thou, he was_ } _cutting_. ἐκόπτ-ομεν, -ετε, -ον, _we, you, they were_ }

Pure verbs contract

αον into ων αες ” ας αε ” α άομεν ” ῶμεν άετε ” ᾶτε αον ” ων

as in—ἐτίμων ἐτίμας ἐτίμα ἐτιμῶμεν ἐτιμᾶτε ἐτίμων εον into ουν εες ” εις εε ” ει έομεν ” οῦμεν έετε ” εῖτε εον ” ουν

as in—

ἐφίλουν ἐφίλεις ἐφίλει ἐφιλοῦμεν ἐφιλεῖτε ἐφίλουν

The present perfect, or the immediately past perfect, in addition to the augment, reduplicates the initial consonant of the root, and its terminations are—

-α, -ας, -ε, _I, thou, he has_ ... -αμεν, -ατε, -ᾶσι, _we, you, they have_ ...

It changes also the σ of the future into a κ—τιμήσω—τετίμηκα τετίμηκας τετίμηκε τετιμήκαμεν τετιμήκατε τετιμήκᾱσι but this κ, when the root ends in γ or κ, appears as χ; thus—πλέκω πλέξω πέπλεχα πράσσω πράξω πέπρᾱχα and in the same way the final π of the root appears as φ; thus—τύπτω τύψω τέτυφα γράφω γράψω γέγραφα

In the pluperfect, which is not often used, the same reduplication takes place, and the terminations are—

-ειν -εις -ει -ειμεν -ειτε -εισαν or -εσαν

as in—

ἐτετύφειν ἐτετύφεις ἐτετύφει ἐτετύφειμεν ἐτετύφειτε ἐτετύφεισαν ἔτυπτον ἐγὼ τὸ παιδάριον, ὅτε εἰσελθὼν ὁ ἀστυνόμος ἥρπασέ με εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον, _I was beating the boy, when the policeman entering took me to prison_.

γέγραφα ἐπιστολὴν πρὸς τὸν πατέρα σου λέγων παῖδά σε εἶναι κόσμιον τοὺς τρόπους, _I have written a letter to your father saying that you are a well-behaved young man_.

LESSON XI

VERBS IN μι

The great mass of Greek verbs, whatever their variations of person and tense may be, agree in this one prominent feature, that the first person singular of the present indicative ends in ω, as in Latin _ō_, possibly a relic of the pronoun ἐγώ, _I_. But there is a small class of verbs in familiar use which, instead of the ω, affix to the first person μι, evidently identical with the English _me_ and the German _mich_—a confusion of the nominative and accusative cases familiar to our ears in French and vulgar English, when we say _it is me_ instead of _it is I_. Whatever may have been the original form of the verbs in μι, as a matter of practice, if we fling off the μι from the present, the future and the tenses cognate with it may be formed directly from an assumed form in ω: thus ἵστημι, _I cause to stand_, στήσω, _I will cause to stand_, as if from στάω; τίθημι, _I place_, θήσω, _I will place_, as if from θέω; δείκνῡμι, _I show_, δείξω, _I will show_, as if from δείκω; and δίδωμι, _I give_, future δώσω, _I will give_, as if from δόω, the Latin _dō_ evidently preserving the simple form from which δίδωμι comes by the prefix of δι and the suffix μι.

Present

ἵστημι, ἵστης, ἵστησι, _I, thou, he_ } _cause to stand_. ἵσταμεν, ἵστατε, ἱστᾶσι, _we, you, they_ }

Imperfect

ἵστην ἵστης ἵστη ἵσταμεν ἵστατε ἵστασαν

Second Aorist

ἔστην ἔστης ἔστη ἔστημεν ἔστητε ἔστησαν

The middle and passive voice follow the form of the regular verb.

The perfect active of ἵστημι, ἕστηκα, is used as a present with a neuter sense, _I stand_, and in like manner, the pluperfect ἑστήκειν, and the 2nd aorist ἔστην, _I stood_.

τίθημι and its analogues have ε for the α in the plural, and first aorist ἔθηκα instead of ἔθησα; and in the same way ἵημι, _to send_, has first aorist ἧκα, _I sent_; so also δίδωμι has ἔδωκα, _I gave_, not ἔδωσα.

The irregular verbs εἰμί, _I am_, εἶμι, _I go_ (usually future: _I will go_), evidently fall under this scheme. For εἰμί, _I am_, see supra, Lesson I. The verb _to go_ has εἶμι, _I go_; εἶ, _thou art going_; εἶσι, _he is going_; ἴμεν, _we are going_; ἴτε, _you are going_; ἴᾶσιν, _they are going_. Imperative ἴθι, _go_.

ἄπιθι, ἄπιθι, ἄκλητος καθίζεις ἐπ' ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἕδρᾳ· στήσω σε ἐνταῦθα, _begone, begone! you have no business in that seat; I will plant you here_.

ἕστηκα ὅπου ἕστηκα, καὶ καθίζω ὅπου καθίζω, _I stand where I stand, and I sit where I sit_.

σοὶ ἔδωκα τὴν βίβλον τὴν κομψήν, σὺ δὲ ἔδωκας τῷ παιδισκαρίῳ τούτῳ· ἐς τοσοῦτον ἆρα καταφρονεῖς μου, καὶ τοῦ δώρου μου; _I gave the pretty book to you, and you gave it to that little girl. Do you so despise me and my gift?_

συνῆκα ἃ λέγεις· ἡ δὲ παρθένος μᾶλλον τῆς βίβλον ὀνήσεται ἢ ἐγώ, _I understand what you say; but the young lady will be more profited by the book than I_.

μάλα ταπεινόφρων σύ γε, _you are very humble_.

οὐχ οὕτως· φιλῶ τὴν παρθένον, _not at all; I love the girl_.

πιθανόν, _likely enough_.

οἱ πολλοὶ τί φασι περὶ τοῦ Γλάδστωνος; _what do people say about Gladstone?_

θαυμάζουσι αὐτὸν δικαίως ὡς δεινὸν μὲν περὶ τοὺς λόγους, τῶν δὲ περὶ τὰς τῆς πόλεως προσόδους ἐμπειρότατον, καὶ δὴ καὶ τῶν τε Ἰταλικῶν καὶ τῶν Ἑλληνικῶν γραμμάτων ἐπιστήμονα, _they admire him, with good reason, as a great speaker, also as an expert and apt financier, and besides a great Greek and Italian scholar_.

ἀληθέστατα λέγεις· εἰ κατέστησαν αὐτὸν καθηγητὴν τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς φιλολογίας ἐν τῷ τοῦ Βουπόρου πανεπιστημίῳ, οὐκ ἐλάττων ἂν ἐγένετο[6] τοῦ Βοεκίου, τοῦ Ἑρμάννου, τοῦ Μυλλέρου, καὶ τῶν ἄλλων Γερμανῶν ὅσοι περὶ τὴν πολυμαθίαν ἐν τοῖς πρώτοις εὐδοκιμοῦσι, _very true; if they had made him professor of Greek in the university of Oxford, he would not have stood below Boeckh, or Hermann, or Müller, or any of the Germans who are most distinguished for great learning_.

[6] For the use of the particle ἄν here and below see Lesson XV _infra_.

καὶ οὕτως γε ἐτύγχανεν ἂν εὐτυχῶς διαφυγὼν τόν τε πολὺν θόρυβον καὶ διαφθορὰν τοῦ βίου πολιτικοῦ, _and so he might have happily escaped the great bother and the corruption of political life_.

δυνατὰ λέγεις· ὅμως οὐκ ἄν τις τυγχάνοι διαπεφευγὼς τὴν εἱμαρμένην, _possibly; however no man can escape his destiny_.

LESSON XII

COMPOUND VERBS

Verbs compounded with a preposition place the augment and reduplication between the preposition and the verb. Except περὶ and πρὸ all prepositions ending in a vowel have the vowel elided before the augment; πρὸ generally forms a crasis with the augment and becomes προὐ. The ν in ἐν and σύν, which had been assimilated in the present, is resumed before the augment.

The prepositions that most frequently occur in compound verbs are—περί, _round about_, as in English _periphery_. ἀπό, _off_ or _away from_, as in _apogee_. ὑπό, _under_, as in _hypocrite_. ἐν, _in_, as in _energy_. εἰς, _into_. σύν, _together_, as in _sympathy_. πρό, _before_, as in _prophet_. παρά, _alongside_ or _away_, as in _parallel_, _parasite_. ἀντί, _instead of_, _opposite to_, as in _antidote_. μετά, _with_ or _after_, as in _metaphysics_. πρός, _toward_, as in _proselyte_. ἀνά, _up_ or _back_, as in _anatomy_. κατά, _down_, as in _catalepsy_. ἐπί, _on_ or _upon_, as in _epilogue_.

ὁ φίλος μου ὁ ἀληθῶς φιλικὸς περιέβαλε τοῖς ὤμοις μου τὴν χλαῖναν σκέπην ψύχους, _my true friend threw his cloak round my shoulders as a protection against the cold_.

ὑπόδησον τὰ ὑποδήματά μου, _put on my shoes_.

ἀπέβαλον τὰ ὑποδήματα τὰ ἀρχαϊκά· κομψότερα τὰ καινότροπα, _I flung away the old-fashioned shoes; those of the new fashion are more elegant_.

χάριν ἔχω σοι τοῦ ἀγάλματος, _thanks to you for the pretty gift_. σήμερον μεταβέβληκεν ὁ οὐρανὸς εἰς τὸ χεῖρον, _to-day the weather has changed for the worse_.

κατὰ φύσιν τοῦτο ἐν τῇ ἡμετέρᾳ πατρίδι οὗ οὐδὲν ἔχει στάσιμον ὁ οὐρανός, _quite natural, at least in our country, where the weather is never steady_.

χθὲς κατέβην εἰς τὸ χῶμα, καὶ εἶδον τὸ μέγα ἀτμόπλοιον, _yesterday I went down to the pier and saw the big steamboat_.

πότερον ἤρεσέ σοι ἢ οὔ; _did it please you or not?_

ὑπερεθαύμασά γε, _I admired it exceedingly_.

ἆρα οὐκ εἰσέβης; _did you not go on board?_

εἰσέβην γὰρ καὶ τὸν ναύκληρον εἶδον καὶ τῶν ναυβατῶν δεινὸν πλῆθος, _I did, and saw the captain and a great number of the crew_.

ἔπειτα δὲ κατέβην εἰς τὴν κοίλην καὶ ἐθαύμασα ἄπειρα σάγματα πίθων καὶ λαρνάκων καὶ κιστῶν καὶ κοφίνων καὶ ἄλλης παντοδαπῆς κατασκευῆς, _afterwards I went down into the hold, and saw with wonder countless piles of barrels, boxes and chests, baskets, and all sorts of stuff_.

ἔπειτα δὲ ἀνέβην, καὶ προσέβλεψα τὸν κυανοῦν οὐρανόν, καὶ χάριν εἶχον τῷ Θεῷ, _then I came up, and looked on the blue sky, and thanked God_.

τελευταῖον δὲ συνέλεξα τὰ σκεύη μου, καὶ ἕστηκα ἐνώπιόν σου ἐν ὁλοκλήρῳ δέρματι, _lastly, I gathered up my chattels, and stand before you with a whole skin_.

ἀγαθῇ τύχῃ· ἀεὶ εὐτυχεῖς· πανταχοῦ πίπτεις, τρόπον τῶν αἰλούρων, τοὺς πόδας ἔχων ἐμπέδους ἐν τῷ δαπέδῳ, _good luck be with you; you are a lucky dog; you always fall on your feet like the cats_.

οὐ τυφλώττω· καὶ ἕκαστα εἴωθα πράττειν προσκόποις τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, _I am not blind, and am accustomed to do everything with forecasting eyes_.

σοφός σύ γε, _a wise man you!_

LESSON XIII

MOODS: SUBJUNCTIVE AND CONDITIONAL

The subjunctive or conjunctive mood is the form which the verb takes when no independent assertion is made as a fact, but only as a sequence of an asserted fact or truth, and having only a secondary or conditional existence; as if I should say in English, _I give you this, that it may be in your power to do so and so_, the secondary sentence preceded by _that_ is altogether dependent on the precedent thing done, _I give you this_. In this example the substantival proposition is in the present indicative, and the subjunctive nature of the dependent sentence is expressed by the auxiliary verb _may_; but, if the leading clause is in the past tense, the dependent clause is expressed by _might_, which in fact is the past tense of _may_, as _I gave you this that you might_. In Greek this past conditional is, from a peculiar usage, commonly called the _optative mood_. In the present lesson we shall confine ourselves to the dependent tense subjoined to a present or a future. The form of the subjunctive is very simple, consisting as it does in the mere change of the terminational vowel or diphthong of the present into ω and η—κόπτ-ω, -ῃς, -ῃ, _I, thou, he_ } _may strike_; κόπτ-ωμεν, -ητε, -ωσι, _we, you, they_ }

and in the first and second aorist the same—κόπτω, ἔκοψα, κόψω,-ῃς, -ῃ.

The subjunctive mood is often introduced by ἐάν or ἤν, ἵνα, and ὅταν, and when a negative particle belongs to it, it is μή, not οὐ.

δίδωμί σοι ταύτην τὴν βίβλον ἵνα καταλαμβάνῃς ὅσον ἐστὶ χαλεπὸν τὸ πρᾶγμα περὶ οὗ ἔγραφες, _I give you this book that you may understand how difficult the matter is on which you were writing_.

ἐὰν μὴ ἐκπονῇς τὰ διδάγματα, οὐ διδάξω σε, _if you don’t work out the lessons, I will not teach you_.

ἢν τὸν δάκτυλον κόψῃς ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὀξείᾳ μαχαίρᾳ, οὐ παρ’ ἐμοὶ ἡ αἰτία, _if you cut your finger with that sharp knife, the blame is not with me_.

ἐκτέλεσον τὸ ἔργον τὸ προκείμενον, ἵνα μή σε ταράσσῃ αὔριον τὰ τῆς σήμερον ἡμέρας ὑστερήματα, _finish the work that lies before you, that the leavings of to-day may not disturb you to-morrow_.

λαβὼν τὸ σκάλευθρον κίνει τὸ πῦρ, ἵνα μὴ πνίγῃ τὴν φλόγα τὸ βάρος τῶν ἀνθράκων, _take the poker and stir the fire, that the weight of the coals may not choke the flame_.

ἐὰν μὴ φυλάττῃ τὴν φλόγα, καύσεις τὰς χειρίδας τοῦ ἱματίου, _if you do not take care of the flame, you will burn the sleeves of your coat_.

φέρε δὴ τὸν Ὅμηρον ἐκ τοῦ θηκίου, ἵνα ἀκούω τί λέγει περὶ τοῦ κάλλους τῶν γυναικῶν, _bring me Homer from the shelf, that I may hear what he says about the beauty of women_.

ἰδοῦ, _here it is_.

ἀνάγνωθι, _read it_.

καλὴ καὶ μεγάλη καὶ ἀγλαὰ ἔργ’ εἰδυῖα, _beautiful and tall, and skilful in tasteful works_.

φεῦ· ὡς εὖ λέγεις. οὐκ ἀργαὶ αἱ γυναῖκες αἱ παρὰ τῷ ἀοιδῷ, _excellent. The singer’s ladies were no idlers._

μιμήτριαί γε τῆς ἐν τοῖς περὶ τὸν βίον σοφῆς προστατίδος Παλλάδος, _they were imitators of their patron goddess Pallas, wise in all that relates to life_.

ῥίψον τὸ κυνάριον εἰς τὸ ὕδωρ, ἵνα μανθάνῃ τὸ νήχεσθαι, _fling the dog into the water, that he may learn to swim_.

ἰδοῦ—νήχεται—ὡς εὐμαθὲς τὸ θρέμμα, _there he goes—he swims—what a clever creature!_

ποίησον σὺ κατὰ ταὐτά, _do you the same_.

οὐδαμῶς· φοβοῦμαι μὴ βαπτίσῃ με τὸ κῦμα, _no; I fear the wave will overwhelm me_.

γελοῖα λέγεις· ἐλαφρότερον γὰρ τὸ σῶμα τὸ ἀνθρώπινον τοῦ ὕδατος, _nonsense; the human body is lighter than the water_.

οὐ καταποντίσει σε τὸ ὕδωρ ἀλλὰ ὁ φόβος, _it is not the water that will drown you, but fear_.

πιθανόν· ὅμως ἀντέχομαι τῆς ξηρᾶς, _likely enough; nevertheless I hold by the dry land_.

σοφός σύ γε, δεξιώτερον δὲ τὸ ζῷον. χαῖρε, _you are wise, but the animal is more clever. Adieu._

LESSON XIV

THE OPTATIVE MOOD

The optative mood, or subjunctive in a historic sequence after a past tense, is distinguished by the domination of the diphthong οι, and runs thus—βουλεύω, _I advise._ βουλεύοιμι, βουλεύοις, βουλεύοι, _I, thou, he_ } _might_ βουλεύοιμεν, βουλεύοιτε, βουλεύοιεν, _we, you, they_ } _advise_.

And so in the second aorist, where there is one, as λάβοιμι, λάβοις, λάβοι, etc., from λαμβάνω, _might, could, would_, or _should get_.

In the first aorist the vowel α rules, and becomes αι, as singular, βουλεύσαιμι, βουλεύσαις or ειας, βουλεύσαι or ειε; plural, βουλεύσαιμεν, βουλεύσαιτε, βουλεύσαιεν or ειαν.

The most common uses of the optative may be classified thus—

(1) In narrating what some one said, without guaranteeing the fact; as if I should say in English, _he said that he were going to do so_, instead of _was_; _e.g._ ἔλεγεν ὅτι ἀνδρὶ νέῳ καὶ σφοδρῷ οὐ ῥᾴδιον εἴη κολάζειν τὰ πάθη, _he said that it was not easy for a man young and vehement to control his passions_.

(2) To express a purpose or consequence in past time, with ὡς, ἵνα, or ὅπως, as ἐπόνει σταθερῶς ἵνα ἆθλον λάβοι, _he laboured steadily that he might gain a prize_.

(3) After εἰ, _if_, to express an indefinite future, generally with ἄν in the dependent clause, as εἴ τις αἵρεσίν μοι δοίη, σπουδάζοιμι ἂν περὶ τὴν Ἑλληνικὴν γλῶσσαν μᾶλλον ἢ περὶ τὴν Ἰταλικήν, _if one gave me the choice, I should prefer to study Greek rather than Italian_.

(4) To express a wish (from which use the name _optative_ came), as μὴ γένοιτο, _may it not happen—God forbid!_

ὁ φίλος μου συνεβούλευσέ μοι πηδᾶν εἰς τὸ ὕδωρ, ὅπως κυνὸς δίκην μάθοιμι τὸ νήχεσθαι· ἐγὼ δὲ οὐκ ἐς τοσοῦτο ἥκω μωρίας, _my friend advised me to leap into the water that I might learn to swim like a dog; but I am not such a fool_.

εὖ λέγεις· ὁμολογῶ σοι τερπνότερον μὲν εἶναι τὸ ὀρχεῖσθαι, χρησιμώτερον δέ ποτε τὸ νήχεσθαι ἔν γε τῇ ναυαγίᾳ, _you say well; I must confess dancing is more agreeable, but swimming is sometimes more useful, especially in a shipwreck_.

τῶν γνωρίμων τῶν ἐμῶν τις εἶπε ὅτι ἀσκοῖ τὸ νήχεσθαι, ἵνα διαφεύγοι τοὺς κινδῦνους τῆς θαλάσσης, _an acquaintance of mine told me that he is practising swimming to escape the dangers of the sea_.

σοφὸς ἐκεῖνος, _a wise man he_.

ἀσπὶς τῶν σοφῶν ἡ πρόνοια, _forethought is the shield of the wise_.

ἀκούσας ᾄδοντος τοῦ ἀλεκτρυόνος εὐθὺς ἀπέσεισα τὸν ὕπνον καὶ ἀπέδραμον ὡς τάχιστα ἵνα μὴ ὑστεροῖμι τῶν ἀγώνων, _hearing the cock crow I forthwith shook off sleep, and ran at full speed that I might not be too late for the games_.

ἐγὼ δὲ ἄνευ τῆς χλαίνης ἀπέδραμον ἵνα μὴ τοῦ λαμπροῦ θεάματος ἀστοχοῖμι, _and I ran off without my plaid, that I might not miss so splendid a spectacle_.

ἐκεῖ δὲ τί εἶδες; _what did you see there?_

θύλακον μέγαν εἶδον ὑδρογόνῳ οἰδοῦντα ἀέρι, _I saw a huge bag full of hydrogen gas_.

καὶ ἄνδρα ἔντοσθεν ἀεροβατοῦντα, ἵνα γε προσχάνοι αὐτῷ πολὺς ὄχλος ὡς ἐπισκεψομένῳ δῆθεν τὸν ἄνδρα τὸν ἐν τῇ σελήνῃ, _and a man inside, sailing through the air, that he might make a rabble of people stare at him, as one going to pay a visit to the man in the moon_.

ὦ τῆς μωρίας, _O what folly!_

μωρὸς μωρὸν θαυμάζει, _fool admires fool_.

καταβαίνοντα αὐτὸν σφοδρότερος αἰφνιδίως ἁρπάσας ἄνεμος παρήνεγκε εἰς τὸ κωδωνοστάσιον τοῦ μεγάλου ἱεροῦ τῶν ἐπισκοπικῶν, καὶ ὁ ἀλεκτρυὼν ὁ ἐν τῷ ἄκρῳ διεκέντησε τὰ ἐντόσθια, _as he was coming down a strong blast suddenly seized him and drove him on to the steeple of the cathedral, and the cock on the top of the steeple pierced his bowels_.

ὦ τοῦ δειλαίου, _O the poor wretch!_

ὦ τοῦ ἄφρονος· δίκαια ἔπαθεν· ἀεροβατεῖν δεῖ τὰς ὄρνῑθας τὸν αἰθέρα, οὐ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, _O the fool! served him right! birds ought to tread the air, not men._

LESSON XV

THE PARTICLE ἄν

Besides the use of ἄν with the optative in reference to a future probability, noticed in the last lesson, it is joined in Greek with the past tenses, the imperfect or aorists, to express what _might_, _could_, _would_, or _should have taken place_ in past time if something else had happened, or had not happened, as ἔπραξας ἂν τὸ δίκαιον εἰ ἔπραξας τοῦτο, _you would have done what is right if you had done this_.

ἐγώ, εἰ ἔγνων τὸ ἦθός σου, οὐκ ἂν ἔδωκά σοι τὸ ἀργύριον, _if I had known your character, I would not have given you the money_.

τίνα δὴ ἁμαρτίαν ἡμάρτηκα; _how have I done wrong?_

ἐσπάθησας ἀχρήστως τὰ χρήματα· εἰ γὰρ ἐτύγχανες νοῦν ἔχων, οὐκ ἂν ἀνήλωσας ἅπαντα εἰς τέρψιν ἐξίτηλον, _you squandered your money uselessly. If you had had sense, you would not have spent it all on a fleeting pleasure._

εἰ ἐτύγχανες σοφὸς ὤν, διέσωσας ἂν τι τῶν σήμερον θησαυρῶν εἰς τὴν χρείαν τῆς αὔριον, _if you had been wise, you would have saved some of to-day's treasure for to-morrow's need_.

μωρὸς ἂν ἦν ὀνειροπολῶν τὴν μέλλουσαν ἡδονήν, τῆς δὲ παρούσης ἁμαρτών, _I should have been a fool, dreaming of the future and missing the present pleasure_.

οὕτως λέγοντα ἐλέγχουσί σε οἱ μύρμηκες καὶ αἱ μέλισσαι, _when you speak thus the ants and the bees confute you_.

εἰ ὁ Βρούσσιος ἔτυχε μὴ νικήσας ἐν τῇ μάχῃ τοῦ Βαννοκβούρνου, τί ἂν συνέβη; _if Bruce had not gained the victory at Bannockburn, what would have been the consequence?_

ἐπικρατήσασα ἡ Ἀγγλία ἠφάνισεν ἂν τὸν Σκῶτον ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, _dominant England would have caused the Scot to disappear from the face of the earth_.

καὶ τοῦτο θεῖον πάνυ ἂν ἐγένετο εὐτύχημα, _and this would have been a great piece of good luck_.

ἐνίοις μὲν οὕτως δοκεῖ, ἐνίοις δὲ οὔ, _some think so and some not_.

τί ἂν συνέβη, εἰ ὁ Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ τοῦ Φιλίππου οὐκ ἐνίκησε τὴν ἐν Ἀρβήλοις νίκην; _what would have been the consequence if Alexander, the son of Philip, had not gained the battle of Arbela?_

διετέλει ἂν ὁ Πέρσης δεσπόζων τῆς ἀνατολῆς, καὶ οὐκ ἂν ἐκήρυσσον τὸ εὐαγγέλιον οἱ ἀπόστολοι Ἑλληνιστί· εἰσήγαγε γὰρ ὁ τοῦ Φιλίππου υἱὸς τὴν Ἑλληνικὴν παιδείαν εἰς ὅλην τὴν ἀνατολήν, _the Persian would have continued lording it over the East, and the Apostles would not have preached the gospel in Greek; for it was the son of Philip that introduced Greek learning into all the East_.

λαμπαδηφόρος δήπου τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς σοφίας ὁ μέγας Ἀλέξανδρος, καὶ προάγγελος τοῦ εὐαγγελίου, _Alexander the Great truly was the torch-bearer of Greek wisdom and the harbinger of the gospel_.

ἀληθέστατα λέγεις, _very true_.

καὶ ταῦτα μὲν περὶ τῆς ἄγαν ὑπηρετικῆς ταύτης προσθήκης εἰρήσθω. χαῖρε, _and now enough of this very serviceable particle ἄν. Adieu!_

LESSON XVI

THE PASSIVE VOICE

expressing not what a man does to another person or thing by the putting forth of his active force, but what he suffers from the active force of another, has its characteristic form in Greek as follows—

Present

Indicative—

πείθ-ομαι, -ῃ, -εται, _I, thou, he is_ } _persuaded_. -όμεθα, -εσθε, -ονται, _we, you, they are_ }

Subjunctive, with the long vowel as in the active voice—πείθ-ωμαι -ῃ -ηται -ώμεθα -ησθε -ωνται and optative with οι—

πειθ-οίμην -οιο -οιτο -οίμεθα -οισθε -οιντο

Imperfect ἐπειθόμην ἐπείθου ἐπείθετο ἐπειθόμεθα ἐπείθεσθε ἐπείθοντο

Future πεισθ-ήσομαι -ήσῃ -ήσεται -ησόμεθα -ήσεσθε -ήσονται

First Aorist ἐπείσθ-ην -ης -η -ημεν -ητε -ησαν

Optative—

singular, πεισθ-είην -είης -είη plural, -εῖμεν -εῖτε -εῖεν

In the perfect as in the active voice the reduplication takes place, as—πέπεισμαι πέπεισαι πέπεισται πεπείσμεθα πέπεισθε πεπεισμένοι εἰσίν

Certain verbs have a second aorist, as στέλλω, _I send_, not ἐστάλθην but ἐστάλην, _I was sent_; and pure verbs have the characteristic contraction of the vowel into a diphthong, as φιλούμεθα for φιλεόμεθα; but these variations are best learned by practice.

ἐστάλησαν οἱ ἀπόστολοι κηρύξοντες τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, καὶ ἐκήρυξαν δεινῶς, _the Apostles were sent to preach the gospel, and they preached it with power_.

ὅτε οἱ ἀπόστολοι ἐκήρυξαν τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ἐν ταῖς Ἀθήναις, ὀλίγοι ἐπείσθησαν, _when the Apostles preached the gospel in Athens, few were persuaded_.

ὁ κακοῦργος ἐκεῖνος ἐπήνεγκέ μοι βιαίαν πληγὴν τῇ βακτηρίᾳ καὶ τὸ νῶτόν μοι ἐτραυματίσθη χαλεπῶς, _that bad fellow struck me a heavy blow with his cudgel, and my back was severely wounded_.

εἶτα δὲ τί συνέβη; _then what happened?_

τῶν τοξοτῶν τις τῶν φυλασσόντων τὴν πόλιν ἥρπασεν αὐτόν, καὶ εὐθὺς ἐνεβλήθη εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον, _one of the policemen who keep the peace of the city laid hold of him, and he was forthwith cast into prison_.

δίκαια ἔπαθεν, _served him right_.

κατὰ φύσιν τοῦτο· πάντες ὅσοι ἄνομοι καὶ βίαιοι δικαίως ἐμβληθήσονται εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον· οὐ γὰρ ἄνθρωποι οἱ τοιοῦτοι ἀλλὰ συγγενεῖς τῶν τίγρεων, _quite natural; all lawless and violent persons will naturally be cast into prison; for such persons are not men, but related to tigers_.

οἴμοι πέπληγμαι, πόθεν ἡ πληγή; _woe’s me, I am struck! whence came the blow?_

ὁ γνώριμός μου ὁ Ἰωάννης Καμερὼν παίζων τὴν κορύνην ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ ἔπληξε πλαγίως τὴν σφαῖραν, ἥπερ παρετράπη εἰς τὴν κεφαλήν σου, _my acquaintance John Cameron, playing at golf on the links, struck his ball obliquely and it was driven against your head_.

οἴμοι—μοι—ὀτοτοτοτοῖ, _O woe’s me, woe!_

ὦ τοῦ ταλαιπώρου, _O poor fellow._

τί χρὴ πρᾶξαι; _what must we do?_

LESSON XVII

THE MIDDLE VOICE

The middle voice, or, as it might more significantly be called, the reflexive or the subjective voice, is a form of the verb where the action does not pass on from the agent to an outward object, but comes back on him, or in some loose way is looked on as done for his benefit, or affecting himself specially. Thus it is in the main identical with what in Latin grammar used to be called neuter verbs, only it is subject to not a few nice shades of personal reference, which leads to its apparent confusion with the active voice, and to various anomalous usages which can only be learned by practice. It is, of course, in strictness more nearly allied to the passive than to the active voice; for in both these voices, as distinguished from the active, the force of the verb is either altogether spent on the agent, or is in some way passively or emotionally or intentionally connected with him. This intimate relationship leads to a similarity of form in the two voices, the present and imperfect middle being in fact identical with the same tenses in the passive voice, and the other tenses, in their characteristic changes, more allied to the passive than to the active.

Future Indicative λύσομαι λύσῃ λύσεται λυσόμεθα λύσεσθε λύσονται

First Aorist ἐλυσάμην ἐλύσω ἐλύσατο ἐλυσάμεθα ἐλύσασθε ἐλύσαντο οὐ τῶν τυχόντων κατέλαβέ με ἔχειν διδασκάλους τῆς σοφίας, τὰ νῦν δὲ δικαίως αὐτὸς σοφίζομαι, _I had the good luck to have no common teachers of wisdom, but now with good reason I profess wisdom for myself_.

ἐδεξάμην τὴν βίβλον ἣν σὺ ἐδέξω παρὰ τοῦ ἀνεψιοῦ, καὶ ἀναγνώσομαι αὐτὴν πάσῃ σπουδῇ, _I received the book which you got from your cousin, and I will read it carefully_.

οὗτος ὁ νεανίας τρέχει δεινῶς· βλάψεται, _this young man runs furiously; he will hurt himself_.

οὐ φοβοῦμαι, _I am not afraid_.

ἀσφαλὴς ἐστὶ τοῖς ποσίν, _he is a steady-footed fellow_.

οὗτος ὁ νεανίας ταλαιπώρως κυπτάζει εἰς τὰς βίβλους· τρίψεται ὑπερτρυφῶν ἐν τῇ ἀναγνώσει, _this young man stoops miserably down into his books; he will wear himself away, stuffing himself with reading_.

μὴ χαλέπαινε· βαθμηδὸν ἀκμάζει πάντα. τὰ μικρότατα σπέρματα, ἀρξάμενα ἀπὸ τοῦ ἠρινοῦ χρόνου, πρὸ τῆς ὀπώρας γενήσεται φυτὰ μεγάλα, _do not repine. All things grow ripe by degrees. The smallest seeds beginning with the spring by harvest time will become large plants._

οὑτοσὶ πλήρεσιν ἀνάγεται τοῖς ἱστίοις, ἡμεῖς δὲ οὐχ ἡττησόμεθα, _this fellow sails out with full sails, but we shall not fall behind_.

σήμερον λαμπρῷ χρώμεθα τῷ οὐρανῷ, _to-day we have fine weather_.

αὔριον δὲ ὕσει ὁ θεός, _but it will rain to-morrow_.

ὤ, τάλᾱς ἐγώ· οὐδὲν διαγίγνεται μένον ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ τῷ κατὰ τὴν Καληδονίαν, _alas, alas! there is no continuity or permanence of weather in Scotland_.

ἀληθῆ λέγεις· μόνον τὸ τῶν Καληδονίων ἦθος σεμνύνεται ἐπὶ τῷ ἄγαν σταθερῷ καὶ ἀμεταβόλῳ· κρατερὸν τὸ Καληδόνιον ἦθος ὡς ὁ γρανιτόλιθος, ὁ ἐν Ἀβερδονίᾳ, _true; only the character of the Scots boasts of steadiness and permanence. The Scottish character is strong as the Aberdeen granite._

χάριν οἶδα τῷ Θεῷ· αὐτὸς ἀλαζονεύομαι τῆσδε τῆς ἐπιμόνου κράσεως οὐ σπανίως μεταλαμβάνεσθαι, _thank God! myself boast that I have a fair share of this persistent temperament_.

δικαίως γε· ἐγγυᾶται τὴν κατόρθωσιν ἡ ἐπιμονή. ἔρρωσο, _and with good reason; perseverance is the pledge of success. Farewell_.

LESSON XVIII

PARTICIPLES

The Greek participle has a large range of idiomatic and significant usages, which can only be learned by reading. For a start, however, it may be enough to say that the participle follows the leading verb of the sentence in many cases where both Latin and English use the infinitive, and that when joined with the definite article the participle performs the function of a relative clause in a less formal style; as if in English, instead of _the man who used such language_ is not a gentleman, we should say _the man the having used_, which no doubt sounds very clumsy, because we require an auxiliary verb to express the past participle, but in Greek ὁ ταῦτα λέξας is manifestly neater and more succinct than ὃς ταῦτα ἔλεξε.

οὐκ ἀνέχομαι οὕτω διαβαλλόμενος, _I cannot stand to be slandered in this way_.

ἀμέλει· ἀμέλει· οἶδα τὸ ἀνθρωπάριον· χαίρει ἀεὶ βλασφημῶν κατὰ τῶν κρεισσόνων, _never mind; never mind; I know the creature; it is his delight always to be speaking ill of men better than himself_.

ποία τις ἦν ἡ βλασφημία; _what was he slandering about?_

ἐτύγχανον ἐγὼ ἐπαινῶν τινὰ τῶν δυνατῶν, ἄνδρα πλούσιον καὶ εὔφρονα καὶ σώφρονα ἐν Μαγκεστρίῳ· ὁ δὲ εὐθὺς ἤρξατο διαβάλλων ὁλοσχερῶς ἅπᾶσαν τήν τε ἀριστοκρατίαν καὶ πλουτοκρατίαν τὴν ἐν τῇ πόλει, _I happened to be praising a gentleman of the influential classes in Manchester, rich and good and sensible, and forthwith he began to denounce in a sweeping style all the plutocracy and the aristocracy of the country_.

φαίνεται διάβολος ὤν, καὶ ὡς ἀληθῶς συγγενὴς τοῦ Κακοδαίμονος, τοῦ Διαβόλου, _he appears to be a calumniator, and a cousin-german of the evil Spirit, the Devil_.

καὶ διετέλει ἐπηρεάζων, ὡς ἐμοῦ παρασίτου ὄντος καὶ ἀκολούθου τῆς βδελυκτῆς τῶν ὀλιγαρχῶν αἱρέσεως· πρὸς δὲ τούτοις τὰ τοιαῦτα λοιδορήματα ἐποίησε τυπωθῆναι ἐν ταῖς ἐφημερίσι, _and he went on to use insolent language, saying_ (or _implying_) _that I was a parasite and a flunkey of the detestable faction of the oligarchs; and in addition to all this he got this insulting language printed in the newspapers_.

τοὺς τοιούτους ἀνθρώπους ἐχρῆν μαστίξαι· ὅμως, τὸ πρότερον λεχθέν, ἀμέλει. δηλός ἐστι νικήσας τὴν ὀργὴν ὁ λέγων ἀμέλει, _such ill-tongued rascals should have been flogged; but, as I said before, never mind. It is plain that the man who says ἀμέλει has conquered his passion._

δυνατὰ λέγεις· ὅμως σύνοιδα ἐμαυτῷ τὴν τῶν Κυαικέρων ἀπάθειαν οὐκ ἐπαγγελλόμενος, _possibly; but I am conscious that I do not profess the apathy of the Quaker_.

ἀμέλει· ἀμέλει· τρὶς νῑκηφόρος ὁ νῑκήσας τὴν ὀργήν. βραχεῖα μανία ἡ ὀργή, _never mind; never mind; he is three times conqueror who has conquered his passion. Anger is a brief madness._

APPENDIX I

ELEMENTARY HINTS ON ETYMOLOGY

(1) In borrowed words, especially when the borrowing language, as English, does not deal largely in sounding terminations, it is a common practice to let the termination drop, either altogether or partly, and leave only the simple root, as from λαμπάδα, _lamp_; from δημοκρατία, _democracy_; from κακοφωνία, _cacophony_, and other such feminines, as _theology_, _philology_, where the α is dropped, and the accent transferred to the antepenultimate after the favourite English fashion, while the German, more faithful to the Greek, preserves the accented ι, and marks the presence of the α by an _e_, as in _Theologié_, _Philologié_.

(2) As the Greek element in the English language often comes to us not directly from the Greek, but indirectly through the Latin of the Middle Ages, it sometimes happens that we find a pure Greek word with a Latin termination attached to it naturalised in English, as in _cathédral_, from καθέδρα, and in _ephemeral_, from ἐφήμερος. In this example the termination _al_, so common in Latin, takes the place of the Greek ος, with the same adjectival force; but in not a few cases, as _optical_, _ethical_, _clinical_, _political_, the _al_ is an unmeaning superfluity, as the adjectival character of the word is already fixed by the Greek termination κος, as in κλινικός from κλίνη. In verbs the termination _ate_ is pure Latin, but appears sometimes barbarously appended to a pure Greek verb, as _homologate_, from ὁμολογῶ.

(3) It is a general rule in etymology that cognate letters, that is, letters pronounced by the same organs, or a similar modification of the vocal organs, easily pass into one another; thus σ and τ being both dental, τ a pure dental, and σ a sibilant dental, and δ being only the blunt form of τ, these three letters pass into one another, as in Attic πράττω for πράσσω, and ῥόδον, English _rose_. So in German _das_ for English _that_. In like manner, λ and ρ being both liquids, λείριον becomes _lily_, and the Latin _Tibur_ becomes the Italian _Tivoli_, by the interchange of the labials and of the liquids.

(4) The termination _s_ in the names of many of the sciences, as _optics_, _acoustics_, _mechanics_, is simply the sign of the plural in English, put for ά the neuter plural in Greek, as in τὰ πολιτικά, _things belonging to the state_; τὰ ὀπτικά, _things belonging to vision_, which, however, the Greeks often express by ἡ ὀπτική in the nominative singular feminine, with τέχνη, _art_, or θεωρία, _theory_, understood.

(5) The termination _ise_ or _ize_, so common in English, generally though not always with an active signification, as in _advertise_, _solemnise_, is the ίζω of Greek, as in σοφίζω, _I make wise_, with σοφίζομαι, in the middle voice, _I profess myself wise_. The word σοφιστής from this verb, in English _sophist_, is the person who makes this profession, as in _baptist_, _theorist_, _atheist_, and other pure Greek words for an agent, with only the loss of the termination ής; sometimes in a hybrid way _ist_ is added to a Latin root, as in _deist_, etymologically but not colloquially identical with _theist_.

(6) Sometimes not only is the terminational syllable cut off, but the initial also, either wholly or in part; so ἐπίσκοπος, with the change of π into the kindred labial β, becomes _bishop_.

(7) When two consonants of different kinship come together, one of them, specially that not belonging to the root, disappears, as from λάπτω, _lap_; from τύπτω, τύπος, _type_.

(8) The aspirate _h_, in Greek _spiritus asper_, has a close affinity with the sibilant _s_; so for ἕξ we have in Latin _sex_, in English _six_; ὗς for _sow_; ἕδος, _sedes_, _seat_.

(9) When a word in Latin or Greek commences with a _p_, by aspiration it becomes _f_ in English and the Teutonic languages; thus for πῦρ we have _fire_, for ποδ-_foot_, for πατήρ, _father_, etc.

(10) The English _w_ is closely connected with the vowels, as appears from _water_ and _ooater_; hence it disappears in Greek altogether, or is represented by a breathing, as in οἶνος, _wine_; ὕδωρ, _water_; ὑετός, _wet_.

(11) In some adjectives the Latin _an_, like _al_, is superfluously appended to the Greek termination in κός, as _rhetorician_, from ῥητορικός.

(12) The Greek κ, as in κύων, and _cornu_ in Latin, appears in the Teutonic languages as _h_, so _hound_, _horn_; κολώνη, _collis_, _hill_.

(13) The letter _m_ at the end of an English word curtailed from Greek signifies the thing done, the product of the verb, as ποίημα, _poem_, the thing made, a poem, from ποιέω, _I make_; so _baptism_ from βαπτίζω, and _chrism_ from χρίω, _I anoint_, and other _isms_.

(14) Finally, as at least two-thirds of the technical words used in our scientific nomenclature, and not a few even outside of the range, are of Greek extraction, the student would act wisely if at starting he were to make a list of all such terms in familiar use, with their Greek form and Greek analysis in an opposite column; as—theology θεολογία (θεός, _God_; λόγος, _discourse_)

He will thus find that he knows already some two or three hundred Greek words in a slightly disguised English form.

APPENDIX II

VOCABULARIES

In accordance with the principle set forth in the preface, these vocabularies, containing the names of the most familiar objects, are to be taken with him as a _vade mecum_ wherever the student goes. He must in no wise be content with the lazy habit of recognising a word only in a passive recipient style when he meets with it in a book, but he must stamp it directly on every object that comes in his way, and repeat it frequently without the intervention of the mother tongue, till he uses it as familiarly as a workman handles his tools. The language will thus become his familiar friend, not, as in the mere bookish method, an occasional visitor. Of course, such a catalogue of words is not intended to be exhaustive; but the learner, after training himself to the habit of thinking and speaking in the foreign idiom, may supply the deficiency by consulting any good English-Greek dictionary, such as Arnold and Browne's, London 1856, and for modern Greek, where that may be necessary, Lascarides's English-Greek dictionary, London 1882. From these sources also, and from his own reading, which must in no wise be neglected, he will be able to pick out appropriate verbs with which he may put the Hellenised objects around him, so to speak, into motion, and hold a conversation with a fellow-student trained to the colloquial method, or with himself, solus cum solo, if he can find no partner in his colloquial exercise.
